The Oldest Constitution

It was 1789 when the present Constitution of the United States went into effect.

That it was meant to protect only the rights, liberties and concepts of property, and the relationships of the states to the nation as they then existed is, of course, not true.

There are some, disturbed by the effort to make the rights of citizens to apply equally, who today seem to be arguing that. But even they grow increasingly uncertain.

We are reminded of our Constitution by the news of the day, both at home and abroad. Gen. de Gaulle's struggle to have the Algerians accept, and live under, the new French constitution is a case in point.

It was also 1789 that the French States General determined to be a national assembly and began the business of providing France with a constitution.

Since then France has had at least 11 constitutions. The American Constitution has been amended, though with great infrequency, but it still is basically the same old Constitution of 1789. Indeed, with perhaps two exceptions, that dealing with prohibition and the repeal thereof, the amendments have all strengthened the fundamentals of the Constitution.

The Algerians are reluctant to come under the eleventh constitution of France because they wish independence or they lack a belief that their rights would be equal to those of the French.

Our Rights

In the United States we believe in our rights as Americans. This is one reason why any amendment to the Constitution giving the states exclusive control will have very little chance of being adopted by the Congress or the people. If, for example, a state had, as has been proposed, complete control over all aspects of education, all sorts of objectionable possibilities would present themselves. A state with a great preponderance, or majority, of one religious belief could then say that all schools would teach that faith.

Or, in the field of science, one state might rule, as some following the Scopes trial in Tennessee in the twenties, that some form of science could not be taught because it was contrary to the Biblical interpretation held by the state legislature and the people. Once a state is given absolute control, and the protection of the Constitution is nullified, then it is possible for many things to be done to the rights of a citizen. This is a dangerous field and is precisely why the founding fathers made it difficult to amend the Constitution.

Mass Acceptance

The Constitution of the United States has endured because of the acceptance by the overwhelming mass of the people of the authority of the federal government as being right. The exercise of authority may not always be palatable. But it is accepted. This is the only way orderly government may be had. Our Constitution has been successful for that reason. Only once did it fail—and the price of this was the War Between the States.

The United States has changed profoundly. The Constitution has not. It is a rigid Constitution. When written 171 years ago it did not comprehend giant industry, the atomic bomb, Social Security, Selective Service, federal aid to highways, or the wonders and dangers of modern technology and communications.

All soul-and-anger-stirring projects can be debated, discussed, rejected, accepted—without abolishing the old Constitution and getting a new one.

"The government" and its "Constitution" cannot have a rival (in the sense of equal) source of power.

France—and many other countries which have adopted written constitutions—have abolished them over and over again because they did not "fit" some great issue. Our Constitution cannot be said to have been tailored for the past, present, or future, save in the general terms of the rights of citizens. That's why amendments touching on rights, or offering possible abridgment of them, are so carefully considered and find passage so difficult.

Congress Rebuffs Ike On Budget

(Copyright, 1959, The New York Times Co.)

WASHINGTON—Big Democratic majorities in the House and Senate rode roughshod over President Eisenhower's "hold-the-line" housing program Wednesday.

Acting only a few hours after an urgent presidential plea for economy (story on Page 2), the two houses voted to increase his budget. It was the first of a long series of tests that will last for two years.

The margins against the President in this initial voting were large, but the test was not clear enough to conclude that a presidential veto on housing could be overridden. In both House and Senate, votes followed party lines usually closely, but the number of Republicans in the House who voted against the President was larger than the number of Democrats who voted to support him.

The House action Tuesday was on a bill of narrow scope. It would raise the interest rate on GI housing with mortgages guaranteed by the Veterans Administration from 4% to 5% per cent. This President wanted.

But the bill also contained the $300,000,000 for the direct veterans loan program. Wednesday's official estimate was that this would for the next fiscal year add $300,000,000 to the spending total in the budget, the one the President wants to keep balanced. There was no estimate of.

Convoy Speeds Westward After Soviets Back Down

HELMSTEDT, Germany (UPI)—The Russians backed down during cold-war maneuvering Wednesday night and released an American truck convoy held within a stone's throw of the West German frontier since Monday.

The five GIs manning the four trucks quickly gunned the vehicles past the border checkpoints into the West to end 56 cold hours of detention in East Germany.

They were not allowed to talk to waiting newsmen.

Soviet border guards freed the trucks finally after a meeting between State Department official Findlay Burns and Col. H. F. Markushin, of the Russian army. Burns said the Soviets had dropped their original demand to inspect the trucks' cargoes, but he did not elaborate.

Sixty-five persons were killed in one of the worst disasters in aviation history. Only eight of the passengers and crew who started here from Chicago survived.

The four-engine Lockheed Electra 188 plunged into the East River a mile short of its runway as it was making an instrument approach from the northeast. It had the aid of a radio beam that told the pilot he was heading in the right direction, a so-called "localizer."

Survivors' stories, Page 26.

Had it been approaching the same runway from the southwest over Jackson Heights, Queens, it would have had further aid from another radio beam—a so-called "glide slope"—telling whether it was too high or too low.

Federal Aviation Agency officials said they had been considering installing the additional type of beam for the northeast approach. The present system has been in effect for a decade, and a spokesman said difficult engineering problems would have to be solved to add the extra protection.

Joseph O. Fluet, chief safety investigator here for the Civil Aeronautics Board, said the airliner's position in the water indicated it was "fairly well aligned with the runway, possibly a bit to the right." He noted the latter condition might have been caused by tide or water movement.

As to whether lack of a second radio beam might have contributed to the accident, Fluet said.

Tax Probe Implicates Merchants

Sales Levy Case Stirs Prosecutions

By JACK NELSON

The State Revenue Department began criminal proceedings Wednesday against some businessmen for sales tax violations.

Details of the proceedings and the number and identity of the businessmen were not disclosed.

However, Deputy Revenue Commissioner George Sims confirmed a report that he is preparing a list of businessmen who will face criminal prosecution and civil action for collection of taxes, penalty and interest.

OTHERS BEING ADDED

Some names are already on the list and others are being added, he said.

"Not only will there be criminal action," Sims said, "but we intend to levy on businesses to collect taxes due the state."

This is the first time the Vandiver administration's get-tough policy on enforcement of sales tax law has reached the prosecution stage.

REQUIRED BY LAW

Sims pointed out that businessmen who collect sales tax from consumers are required by law to make a monthly report and remittance of the collections.

"Those who fail to file returns and tax payments monthly are guilty of a misdemeanor," Sims said.

He also issued a stern warning to any businessmen who have failed to register with the State Sales Tax Unit as required by law.

Sims said that any businessman who has failed to register can avoid prosecution by voluntarily registering and remitting back collections with penalty and interest.

Operators of unregistered businesses will "run the risk of prosecution" if they have to be sought out by sales tax agents, Sims said.

Failure to register constitutes a misdemeanor, punishable by 12 months in jail and $1,000 fine.

Directors of the state's nine sales tax offices have been instructed to thoroughly survey their regions for unregistered businesses, Sims said.

Vandiver Bill Asks Loans to New Industry

By BRUCE GALPHIN

A Georgia Industrial Development Administration with power to lend some $135 million to business firms locating in the state will be proposed by the Vandiver administration Thursday.

The bill is intended to carry out Gov. Vandiver's campaign pledge to step up the pace of industrial growth in Georgia.

An administration source pointed out that the proposed agency would not require any new taxes for support.

The money would be made available by combining the funds available from various retirement systems.

Actual control of the funds will remain in the trustees of the individual systems, but the proposed GIDA will have final authority.

Police for Rights Ruled Out by Ike

By JERRY T. BAULCH

WASHINGTON (AP)—President Eisenhower said Wednesday that it "would be a wicked thing" even to suggest setting up a great federal police force to enforce civil rights.

He said the administration's civil rights bill will be "moderate and decent" and will be aimed at avoiding anything that is certain to irritate—"exacerbate the whole situation," he phrased it.

Something "that is going to raise tempers and increase prejudice could be far more harmful than good," he said.

The President set forth his views at a news conference at the same time Senate Republican Leader Everett M. Dirksen of Illinois.

nois announced the President's civil rights proposals will be introduced in Congress Thursday.

The program was said to provide for:

1. Making it a felony to interfere forcefully with the carrying out of a court order. The purpose would be to check any officials found to be stirring up disorder in voting and integration cases.
2. Authorizing the attorney general to file federal court actions intended to block use or threat of force to deprive anyone of voting rights.
3. Authority for the attorney general to inspect the books of registrars and others in cases dealing with denial of voting rights in federal elections.
4. Authorization for commanding officers to ask the Health, Education and Welfare Committee.

'Wrong Turn' Driver Hits Twirling Prop

CLEVELAND (UPI)—An elderly motorist drove between the whirling propellers of an Air Force Hercules C130B turboprop transport as it prepared to take off at Cleveland Hopkins Airport Wednesday night.

The motorist, Andrew J. Bird, 70, of Fairview, Ohio, escaped injury although the propeller made "six neat slices through the roof of his auto."

"I must have made a wrong turn," said Bird.

Those in the trucks besides Bird were drivers Pfc. Benjamin G. Peoples, 20, of Theodore, Ala.; SP4 Robert E. Love, 20, of Plain City, Ohio; SP4 Elwood F. Johnson, 25, of Brooklyn, and SP4 James E. Cook, 22, of Hardeeville, S.C.

Amended 'Honesty' Bill Passes

The General Assembly Wednesday approved and sent to the governor a conference committee version of the "honesty in government" bill.

It was described by administration leaders as being "in no sense" a weakening of the original proposal.

Floor Leader Frank Twitty told the House that amendments dealt with minor differences in the House and Senate versions.

Some of the provisions worked out by the conference committee on the honesty bill were:

1. Justices of the peace but no judge of a court of record could serve in the Legislature.
2. Expert help "borrowed" by the legislature from executive departments may work for the assembly both during the session and during the week-long "carry-over" period afterward if they are on leave without pay from the executive departments.
3. The prohibition against members of the General Assembly receiving money to influence their actions was spelled out.

Vandiver's Veto Kills Own Bill On Bridge Body

Gov. Ernest Vandiver Wednesday exercised his veto power for the first time, killing one of his own administration bills.

It was Senate Bill 5 to place the State Toll Bridge Authority under the State Highway Board.

Three of Vandiver's economy bills proposed to place the Toll Bridge Authority and the Rural Roads and Bridge Building Authorities under the Highway Board to reduce administrative expenses.

But Vandiver said the Toll Bridge Authority has only one project, the Sidney Lanier Bridge at Brunswick, and it was decided the change might have some effect on the Authority's bonds.

Teachers Given Contract Pledge

Gov. Vandiver promised Georgia teachers Wednesday they will be paid for the year covered by their contracts in case schools are closed to prevent integration.

In a letter to Frank M. Hughes, executive secretary of the Georgia Education Assn., Vandiver declared that "Georgia has never faltered in or repudiated a solemn contract and never will as far as I am concerned."

The governor's statement was viewed as an effort to relieve city systems from levying taxes for mixed schools, Rep. Raymond Reed of Cobb urged an amendment assuring teachers they would be paid for a full year in case schools were shut. The amendment lost.

(Reed said Marietta was having a hard time hiring teachers because of the uncertainty of employment.)

Elsewhere on the school segregation front, Atty. Gen. Eugene Cook issued a prepared statement declaring he would prefer to close schools rather than have even token integration.

Circles Field Half Hour In Downpour

THOMASVILLE—President Eisenhower finally got to Thomasville for his vacation late Wednesday after landing 60 miles from here at Moody Air Force Base near Valdosta in a blinding rain-storm.

Bad weather at Spence Air Base near Moultrie, where the presidential plane, Columbine III, was scheduled to land, forced Eisenhower to go on to Moody AFB.

The weather at Moody was worse, if anything, but instrument landing facilities there enabled the President's pilot, Col. William H. Draper, to bring the Columbine safely to earth at 4:18 p.m.

CIRCLED FIELD

Even so, the landing conditions were at an absolute minimum, and, in fact, the Eisenhower party had to circle the field for a bumpy half an hour before the cloud ceiling lifted sufficiently.

Greeted by his host, George M. Humphrey, the President, wearing a raincoat, splashed through ankle-deep water to get into his car and drive 60 miles to Thomasville and then seven more miles to George Humphrey's Milestone Plantation.

WATER-SOAKED HIGHWAY

Splashing through great puddles of water on the highway, the White House caravan rolled through the piney woods country at about 50 miles per hour and arrived at Milestone at 5:55 p.m.

The route, by-passing Valdosta, took the President through Hahira, Barney and Pavo on his way to his vacation retreat for four or five days of hunting and golf.

"Looks like you have a little rain here," Eisenhower commented as he spurned an umbrella and walked down the ramp from the plane to his car.

The presidential limousine had been sped through the storm-swept countryside from Spence Air Base to Moody AFB when

Dulles, Macmillan Agree on Germany

Discuss 10-Day Russia Tour Scheduled by Prime Minister

By DREW MIDDLETON

(Copyright, 1958, The New York Times Co.)

LONDON — U.S. Secretary of State Dulles and Prime Minister Macmillan Wednesday night discussed the latter's projected visit to Moscow in an atmosphere of complete agreement on policy toward Germany. The second of Dulles' three meetings with British leaders was devoted largely to a "reconnaissance in force" which the prime minister will make of the Soviet Union's positions on Germany and European security.

Macmillan is expected by officials to announce his plans for a visit to Moscow in the House of Commons. He is taking up an invitation open since the then Premier Bulganin and Nikita Khrushchev visited London in April 1956.

EXPECTED TO ACCOMPANY

In government circles it was accepted as "reasonably certain" that the prime minister will be accompanied by Foreign Secretary Selwyn Lloyd, that the visit will last 10 days and will include visits to Russian industrial and scientific centers, and that the party probably will leave around Feb. 20.

Since Dulles announced on his arrival Wednesday morning that he had not brought any new proposals on Germany to Europe, Macmillan's scouting trip has assumed new importance. The emphasis in Western policy, officials said, is now on the price which the Soviet Union will exact for Germany's reunification in freedom. Macmillan will try to assess this price during his visit.

COVER ENTIRE QUESTION

Macmillan and Dulles talked for two hours and five minutes. The talks ranged over the entire German question, starting with steps the allies would take in event of a new blockade of West Berlin and continuing through policy positions on European security and German unity.

Dulles will confer with the prime minister again Thursday after his scheduled discussion in the morning with Lloyd. The latter was present at Wednesday's talk at 10 Downing Street.

On arrival Wednesday morning, Dulles told reporters that, although he had no new proposals with him, he suspected that "during the coming weeks we will be forced to take some important decisions pressed on us by the Soviet Union."

The first hour of British-American discussion was devoted to Germany and Berlin. According to both U.S. and British officials, identity of views was almost complete.

TAKEN FOR GRANTED

There was, it was emphasized, no necessity for leaders to reject Soviet proposals that East German authorities be substituted for Russian officials in Berlin.

"We don't have to restate this," a British spokesman said. "It is taken for granted by both sides."

There was a slight difference in emphasis on terms under which the two governments would accept a foreign ministers meeting with the Soviet Union this spring.

The United States has stated it will not confer if the agenda is limited to Soviet proposals for Berlin and the drafting of a peace treaty. The administration wants the area of discussion widened to include German unity and European security. The British, through Macmillan in the House of Commons, have accepted a narrower field grouped under the general theme of Germany's future.

Kennan Goes to Senate To Argue For a Neutral, Reunited Germany

By RUSSELL BAKER

(Copyright 1959, The New York Times Co.)

WASHINGTON — George F. Kennan put his controversial argument for a sweeping revision of this country's German policy before the Senate's Foreign Relations Committee Wednesday.

Testifying before its subcommittee on disarmament, the former chief of policy planning for the State department proposed that the United States consider negotiating a kind of neutral status for a reunited Germany in return for a Soviet pullback from Eastern Europe.

The new status of Germany, he said, should then be enforced by making it absolutely clear to the Soviet Union that any violation would be a provocation of war.

DULLES ATTACKED PLAN
Kennan's proposals, first proposed last year in the British Broadcasting Corporation's Reith lectures, have been heavily attacked by Secretary of State Dulles and Dean Acheson, secretary of state under the Truman Administration.

Despite this formidable opposition, however, the Kennan idea for a new approach to the stale-mated problem of Central Europe has persisted and has had deep impact on the thinking of the young senators who are becoming the Democrats' influential spokesmen on foreign policy.

Today, for example, Sen. Humphrey (D-Minn.), and chairman of the disarmament subcommittee, put himself in broad agreement with many of Kennan's ideas. He praised Kennan for a "frank and long overdue statement" of how this country could take "a more flexible approach" to the German problem.

Sen. Fulbright (D-Ark.), new chairman of the full committee, said in a news conference last week that he would like to see Dulles move off "dead center" and consider new approaches to a whole range of world problems, including the possibility of a Central European settlement based on the Kennan disengagement idea.

PLAN SURVIVED ATTACKS
What is significant is that Kennan's proposals have survived the attacks of the elders of both parties and are coloring the thought of influential younger senators at a time when the country seems headed for another negotiation with the Soviet Union on the German problem.

In his testimony today, Kennan said that real disarmament would depend on prior relief of political tensions, which now exist most acutely in the "crucial and neuralgic area" of Central Europe.

"The best we can hope for" from a negotiated settlement, he said, would be the following:

The reunification of Germany free of the Soviet orbit.

A new condition in which Eastern Europe could evolve toward greater national independence from Soviet dominance.

MAKE PLAN CLEAR

A clearly defined and mutually acceptable agreement of Germany's new status, so carefully phrased that it would not be susceptible to violation as some ambiguous agreements with Moscow have been in the past.

Withdrawal of both Eastern and Western military forces from Germany.

An agreement that Germany should not have nuclear weapons or weapons for strategic air attack.

A conventional German defense force strong enough to prevent incursions from without.

Achievement of such a result, Kennan went on, would involve Western concessions. He said that changes in Western policy should be made only as part of a "package" settlement. He emphasized that no concessions should be made in advance or unilaterally to court Soviet "goodwill" in response to "propaganda" proposals.

Alexandria School Told To Integrate

U.S. Judge Orders Admission Of 9 Negroes in Virginia City

RICHMOND, Va. (AP)—A federal judge told a third reluctant Virginia community Wednesday it must admit nine Negro pupils to white schools next Tuesday.

The order of District Court Judge Albert V. Bryan to the school board of Alexandria came as Norfolk and Arlington went through a third peaceful and almost routine day of racially mixed classes.

Orderly compliance by Alexandria in the Norfolk-Arlington pattern should bring a temporary respite in the running school crisis. Charlottesville, granted a delay by a U.S. appeals judge, reopened a high school and an elementary school Wednesday on an all-white basis to all but about 300 of 1,675 displaced pupils.

The two schools, along with six in Norfolk, had not opened for the September term because of state laws designed to fend off federal integration order. Those laws since have been declared unconstitutional.

Alexandria officials did not say immediately what they intended to do.

CALM LAUDED

The calm that prevailed on the Norfolk and Arlington school fronts won plaudits from President Eisenhower at his Washington news conference.

Judge Bryan announced his decision in the Alexandria case a day after hearing arguments on a challenge to the school board's action in turning down 14 Negro applications for transfer to white schools.

He ruled that the historic colonial market place city, a few miles down the Potomac from Washington, must open three white schools to nine of the Negroes. He said the school board's refusal to admit the five others was proper because of residence nearer to a Negro school in the case of three high school applicants and academic deficiencies in the case of the two rejected grade school applicants.

FOUND NO BASIS

But he said he found no basis, other than race, for the turndown of the other nine.

The admission of the Alexandria nine will bring to 30 the number of Negro pupils in the state's white public schools since 100 per cent segregation reached the end of an era Monday.

Four are in Arlington—Alexandria's northern Virginia neighbor—and 17 are in Norfolk, the state's big seaport city 200 miles to the south.

Charlottesville, in the central section, won a respite that reopened schools because its officials proved their willingness to proceed with plans to desegregate later—most likely next September.

FIRST TO CLOSE

Warren County High at Front Royal, near the northwest tip of the state, was the first school to close under the defunct state law when 22 Negroes were ordered admitted. County officials, in the face of pressure from counsel for the National Assn. for the Advancement of Colored People, said this week they would move to comply with the pending desegregation order.

Savannah Couple Suffocates

Two persons died Wednesday apparently from suffocation in a garage apartment in Savannah.

The victims were John L. Morris, 37, and his wife Pauline, 29. Morris formerly was employed as a welder here.

He had moved to Warner Robins and was preparing to move back to Savannah Wednesday. He and Mrs. Morris went to the apartment in which they were moving to do some work Tuesday night. A daughter, Margaret, 4, spent the night with her grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. James T. Morris, who live across the street from the apartment.

The elder Morris went to the apartment twice Wednesday morning and tried to awaken his son. Shortly after 2 p.m., he entered the apartment by forcing a window and found his son and daughter-in-law dead.

A heater was turned up rather high and officers said the couple evidently died of suffocation.

SOLVESBORG, Sweden (AP)—Taxi driver Ernst Petterson, 50, picked up a passenger at the late night train as he had done for more than 20 years.

The passenger explained in broken Swedish that he wanted a hotel. He was a pleasant man and they chatted on the way.

The passenger joked about his age. He was 72 and had enjoyed the trip from Chicago to Sweden. He ran a plumber's business in Chicago. He was born in Sweden but hadn't been home for more than 50 years. But now he had come back to see his native home before he died.

"Where were you born?" Petterson asked.

"In Rydal near here."

"And what's your name?"

"Adolf Petterson."

"Then you must be my brother," Petterson exclaimed.

Adolf Petterson never arrived at the hotel.

Let's Grant Cities At Least This Sop

While by no means answering the problem of the state's changing economy and population pattern, approval by the House Ways and Means Committee of a proposed constitutional amendment to permit the state to give financial aid to cities and small towns marks first admission by the General Assembly that an urban problem exists.

Because of the revolution in agriculture, accompanied by a huge industrial movement of equal import, urban populations and urban governments have grown all out of proportion to the consideration they receive from state government. While counties understandably occupied a major position under an economy primarily geared to agriculture, that no longer is the case.

These urban governments, surrounded in many cases by suburban areas requiring urban services, have been squeezed tighter and tighter to find tax funds and tax sources to meet demands upon them. While the state continues to collect more taxes—the majority from urban populations—there has not been a proportionate increase in state services to those areas.

The proposed constitutional amendment will not necessarily mean the current discrepancies will be corrected. It would open the way, however, for political action to be taken in line with the changing economic and social patterns of the state.

We believe, along with Rep. Charles Gowan, that the people of Georgia are aware of the problem of our cities and would be willing to go along with just measures to relieve them. The General Assembly should give them the chance.

Police Burglary Scandal Is Another Warning

The police department burglary scandal, now involving at least eight officers, deserves the full airing it is receiving by the grand jury, by the Aldermanic Police Committee and by the department itself.

In view of disclosures to date, one cannot help wondering if it is a symptom of more than the mere facts of the burglaries themselves. Certainly the shocking admission by a police lieutenant that he failed to report facts concerning alleged stolen goods in order to protect the department is indicative of an alarming state of morale.

The lieutenant's conduct cannot be excused with any amount of rationalizing. Condoning law violations by those hired to uphold the law either directly or covertly by superiors eventually could lead only to complete demoralization of the entire force. Even Chief Jenkins cannot justify such actions as well-intentioned.

The scandal is a symptom of the need to upgrade the police department's professional standards in line with law enforcement requirements of a metropolitan community. Recent salary increases are the first step. The job of being a policeman should be professional, with pay scales and working conditions which would minimize temptation.

Again it should be pointed out that only a very few of the total force is involved. It is regrettable that the incident will reflect upon the others as well. It is to the credit of policemen themselves, including a rookie patrolman, that they took the initiative in breaking the case.

Studies made of the police department during the last two years resulted in certain recommendations, few of which have been put into effect because of the necessity for economies. But eventually the community must accept its responsibility of underwriting modernization of the department if such occurrences as this are to be prevented.

The Taxpayer Seems To Have a Lobby Now

The farmer has many friends. Among his friends are aspirants for public office who assure the man on the farm that, if elected, they will see he gets more for the crops he works so hard to produce.

There are more taxpayers than farmers, for whereas every farmer is a taxpayer, not every man who pays taxes lives on or by the farm. Yet, like the farmer, he works by the sweat of his brow or his white collar.

One wonders at times if the taxpayer has friends. One is encouraged, however, by news from the State Purchasing Dept.

The department has bought 800 tires at a savings up to $5.94 per tire over prices paid by the state in December.

We have had a change of administration since December and an apparent change of policy.

As taxpayers we feel better. It looks as if we who must pay for those tires do have friends in the Capitol after all.

It looks as if those charged with doing our buying are asking themselves, "What can we do for the taxpayer?" just as politicians with an eye on the next election are asking, "What can we do for the farmer?"

Ike Makes Good Sense On 'Rights' Police Force

Everyone of whatever persuasion will agree with President Eisenhower that the nation does not need and should not have a special police force to enforce whatever civil rights legislation may be adopted. The President says that such a force would be a "wicked thing."

We know of no serious effort to create such a force. No responsible person has proposed any special enforcement agency. Regular departments of government are quite capable of enforcing any federal laws.

Legislation of an inflammatory nature, with little or no chance of passage, often is introduced for political reasons. The President was quite right in saying this does more harm than good.

Following his press conference yesterday at which this statement was made, the President took off for Thomasville, where he will spend several days at the plantation home of former Secretary of the Treasury George Humphrey. We join in welcoming him to Georgia and hope he finds the quail shooting the best ever.

State Teachers Receive Pledge of Good Faith

The state's school administrators slept better last night.

Accustomed to spending most of their waking hours looking for competent teachers, the superintendents and board members have been lying awake recently foreseeing a possible acute shortage next September.

Their worry has come from the shadow of closing hanging over every public school in Georgia.

Teachers have financial obligations—debts to be met, installments to be paid. A teacher would hesitate to sign a contract if he thought his pay might be cut off during the year.

Gov. Ernest Vandiver has assured the teachers they need have no fear. He declares their contracts will be honored. He says, "The teachers of Georgia will be protected."

The governor's pledge is a timely, highly commendable example of statesmanship.

Let the teachers rest assured. It is quite sad that parents have no such assurance.

Georgia Should Hasten Death of Fee System

Inroads into the fee system for county officials in Georgia deepen with each passing year.

At the current session of the General Assembly legislation has been introduced to change various offices in nine counties to a salary basis. Similar measures affecting a good many other counties have been passed in recent years.

Such action reflects both the increasing resentment on the part of the public at the evils of the fee system and the growing recognition of the salary method's beneficial effects upon government.

Counties that have made the transition seem pleased with the results. Where dissatisfaction boils in those counties where the antiquated fee arrangement is still in effect.

So-called speed traps incur more public wrath than any other single device linked to the fee system.

The take in some instances is estimated in the hundreds of thousands of dollars annually, with the sheriffs receiving the lion's share.

While all citizens should applaud genuine and productive efforts at reducing the number of highway accidents, speed traps run primarily for selfish purposes of the operators breed disrespect for law enforcement and ill will for individual communities.

At any rate, more and more counties are recognizing the fee system for what it is and are acting accordingly. But it is a piecemeal approach. Public demand is mounting for the General Assembly to speed the process with legislation of statewide application.

Milwaukee Journal

Adlai Stevenson spoke recently at a memorial service in Washington for the late Rev. A. Powell Davies. And he recalled something Dr. Davies had said that should be the basis for any intelligent approach to world problems. It could even be the starting point for a foreign policy. It was simply this: "The world is now too dangerous for anything but truth, too small for anything but brotherhood."

Atlantan Says That Americans Owe Much Of Tradition of Freedom to Thomas Paine

Atlanta—I am surprised and a bit alarmed. Upon close examination, neither The Constitution nor the Journal of Jan. 29 had any mention of Thomas Paine. It was his birthday, and if Washington, Lee, Lincoln and Jefferson are entitled to special recognition on the anniversary of their birthdays, surely Paine is, too. "These are the times that try men's souls" (from "The Crisis," by Paine), and I cannot think of any one individual who contributed more to the basic philosophy of the nation.

Paine, the author of the Declaration of Independence, author of the pamphlets entitled "Common Sense," friend of Ben Franklin, Thomas Jefferson, George Washington, James Monroe and the first French Republic. The author of the "Age of Reason" was perhaps the greatest humanitarian of all time; he gave his entire adult life to the cause of freedom, liberty and justice. And now he is not even mentioned on the anniversary of his birth. He is being written out of modern American history, out of the memories of the American people. Why?

It is tragic that we should show no gratitude to such a great man, to whom we are all greatly indebted for many of the rights and privileges we have now.

'Something's Rotten On Decatur Street'

Atlanta—I have read with considerable amusement your editorial condoning the extracurricular burglary activities of certain members of Atlanta's police department. Also sub-sister Sibley's maudlin rationalization that as long as they were stealing for their children, everything was fine and dandy.

If that had been four members of the State Patrol under the late and unlamented Griffin administration, they would have been pilloried from Marietta to Hahira and you would have wanted them executed rather than excused. But because it is the Hartfield dynasty and his beautiful but bumbling police chief

State Should Study Ways To Help Cities Financially

Georgia municipalities are not the only ones wrestling with financial problems. In many cities the property tax has already been reached and the scramble to find new property taxes is now approaching.

It is easy to understand that the cities are hard up for money. According to the Census Bureau, expenditures for all U.S. cities climbed in 1957 to a record $13,900,000,000, up 13.6 per cent from the year before. Debts mounted to $18,600,000,000, an increase of 11.2 per cent and likewise a new high.

Some cities grappling with budgetary problems have turned to a local income tax as an avenue of relief. A levy of that type, by one name or another, is currently in use in eight of the nation's 41 largest cities.

In New York City, where municipal taxes are already the highest of any major city in the country, $190.60 per capita, the administration has gone so far as to advocate the legalization of off-track betting on horse racing. Mayor Robert Wagner claims a tax on such wagering would yield the needed additional revenue of 145 million dollars to balance a two-billion-dollar budget.

The alternative appears to be who are involved, you go into paroxysms of commendation because Handsome Herbert moved fearlessly to clean up the mess "once it was called to his attention."

First they were ostensibly tied in with a lottery operation. Now some apparently have been caught red-handed breaking and entering. Are some of "Atlanta's Finest" going to have to be caught in the act of arson or rape for you to admit that something may well be rotten down on Decatur street . . . and that the ultimate responsibility lies with the mayor and the chief?

ARTHUR WELLS.

Why Didn't Ike Rip GOP 'Spendthrifts'?

Atlanta—One wonders why Ike didn't lash out at the Republican "spendthrift spenders" for causing him to have the largest peacetime budget in the nation's history? Who have been the spenders for the past six years?

Flexible Position On Berlin Wanted

New York — We peoples of the Western alliance have a duty both to Berlin and world peace which is not served by everlastingly saying no to Soviet proposals, however unsatisfactory some of them are. Our State Department, as the British seem to agree, does not help by insisting that it will only discuss reunification of Germany by free elections. This united and armed Germany must then be allowed to remain in NATO. No conceivable Russian government would agree to that any more than we would agree to an armed and united Germany as a member of the Warsaw Pact.

Our American position in Berlin is doubly legal along the lines of the State Department's contention, but our duty to West Berliners morally rests on better considerations: (1) Their gallant stand for democracy against communism and (2) the high degree of responsibility born by our own wartime leaders for the present situation, a consequence of their sadly erroneous approach to peace.

To attempt a solution of the present impasse by war would be to jeopardize Berlin itself as well as world peace. Even if a limited war did not — as would be all too likely — grow by accident or design into World War III, it is difficult to believe that it would be so limited as to spare Berlin near devastation. Therefore, any hope of progress by negotiation must be explored.

Leo Aikman The Ladies Like 'Doc' Collins

One man was the idol of 300 to 400 women last weekend at Jekyll Island. The object of fond feminine eyes was not Pat Boone or Rock Hudson or Errol Flynn, home from the wars. The man on whom the ladies hung verbal bells was M. D. Collins, superintendent emeritus of schools in Georgia. Among what

"Doc" Collins said in reply to love and affection was that the one thing which he has no objection to acquiring secondhand is lipstick.

And I learned of the Grand Old Man in education in the state that:

1. He never went to school to a woman teacher.

2. His first teaching assignment was a one-room mountain school with eight grades and 81 students, including little Collinses closely akin. In fact, Doc's sisters and brothers, one of whom was the first student he whipped. A brother, that is.

3. He was paid $22.50 a month for five months on that first assignment.

4. He used to board around with the families in his constituency and in one place had cold collars for breakfast every morning.

OF ALL THINGS: Georgians can be proud of what is now happening to "their island." Soon we can rank it with Stone Mountain, Rock Eagle, and The Center for Continuing Education as exceptional in our state, if not distinctly unique. . . . Ben Fortson, who as chairman of the Jekyll Island Authority represents us taxpayer — stockholders, was on hand at breakfast Saturday morning on an inspection tour of the estate. . . . Jennie Hartman, in charge of the restaurant on the beach side, told us of the appreciative letters she has had from Nova Scotia miners who were guests at the island. They raved particularly about the fresh fruit juice, the cereal and the eggs which were out-of-the-ordinary breakfast diet for them. . . . The Hartman-managed establishment gladly serves hot syrup with the pancakes. Ben Fortson said, "Let's make it read 'Georgia cane.'" . . . Charlie Wilcox proudly showed off the motel accommodations and pointed out on the wall in the lobby a picture of a Jekyll Island egg-laying sea turtle. The Lady Who Reads Over My Shoulder vows the mama turtle is the same we saw on the beach in midnight moonlight June, 1948. If so, the amphibian hasn't aged a bit.

Feeling of Tension Fills Bahama Isle

GRAND BAHAMA ISLAND—Ralph McGill.

Editor, Dear Mac: I trust you didn't have as much trouble getting back from the frozen North as I had moving South to this tropic paradise. The flight from Atlanta to Orlando always puts on some sort of show. The last time it was the most fantastic display of lightning I've ever seen anywhere in the world.

This time it was a quieter but more insidious display. We flew under clear skies and a full moon until we hit the flat pine lands of Florida. Then all below us was draped in an opalescent mist—not thick, looking straight down through it, the way a passenger looks down, for we could see the gleam of lights below. But too thick for the pilot, who must peer for miles ahead to pick out the lights of his landing field. So the pretty dark-eyed stewardess came back, after she had fed us, to say we were going to circle awhile. Orlando had a 300-ft. ceiling and a visibility of one-eighth of a mile. The rules said no landing if the ceiling was 300 and visibility less than one-half a mile.

So we circle around awhile and the fog gets thicker instead of lighter and we go on to Daytona Beach instead of Orlando and come down there in the wet warmth of a Florida night—60 odd miles from Orlando, where most people wanted to go, and 80 miles from Cape Canaveral, where I wanted to go.

By this time the fog that shrouded Orlando was moving south and east, so in a rented car I go groping down U.S. 1, meeting cars traveling in a halo of pink and bluish light as their headlights glowed like opals in the fog.

At Orlando you could sense something was coming up. The Conair people, who build the Atlas missile, were in from the West Coast and that strange tension that grips the Cape—strangers everywhere and men talking in whispers and the murmur of voices from every room in the motel—was upon the town.

The next morning I flew on here to this island with the Air Force in the old Air Force manor—up at dawn, getting briefed on using the life jacket, flying in bucket seats with the usual crate of lettuce bumping against your knees and the Mae West gnawing your neck. Finally, touchdown on a coral atoll and the usual beards around.

It was worth it, though, for the tension was here, too, and for good reason. For just after dusk the flare came, far to the north, and then the moving star came over going like a bat out of you know where and headed for the Lord knows where.

It was a sight.

Best,
H. MARTIN.

Religion, Science Need Each Other

One hundred years ago Charles Darwin published "Origin of Species," a book that was destined to cause many people to think deeply regarding scientific explanations of man's life and world. Since 1859, many great revolutions have taken place in our world. Some of these have been social, economic and political.

None has been more far-reaching in its effect on our life and thought than the scientific revolution in which our understandings have been broadened and deepened.

During the past century much bad blood has flowed in the struggle between scientists and churchmen. Even now there is some lingering feeling in some quarters that science is locked in a mortal combat with the church. Nothing is further from the truth. Genuine religion and true science long ago joined forces to help in broadening our understanding of this wonderful world and in helping to improve human welfare.

Now, of course, some stubborn and dogmatic churchmen try to live as though science were an unknown thing and some scientists still think that they can better interpret theology than churchmen. But such instances, among reasonable men, are not common.

Some time ago I listened to a preacher on radio. He was arguing against science. I suppose he really wanted to return, if possible, to an earlier age. My thoughts were these: "Man, do you know what you're saying? Science has given you this radio by which your voice ranges far and wide. Science gave to the early Christian, like Paul, highways by which he took God's Words to the most remote quarters of the world. Science gave us printing presses by which Bibles have been placed in the hands of millions of persons. And scientific tools, such as language study and archaeology, are making it possible for us to read with greater understanding and clarity God's Book."

Science and religion need each other desperately.

I want to see more scientific achievements, more accomplishments which will benefit mankind. And I believe the progress in science will benefit, not destroy, man, because of the partnership that is developing between men of good will within the church and within the laboratories.

Beyond the observable, the measurable and the demonstrable, where science speaks with authority, is the realm of values, principles and morality where religion speaks with authority. These do not represent two worlds. They are in fact one and belong together.

Governors Dictate Convention Choice

WASHINGTON—This city, as usual, is dominating the national debate over the presidential nominees of 1960. It is providing most of the candidates and most of the political headlines, but in the last analysis it will probably not be this capital but the state capitals that will pick the nominees.

In the last few days, wide publicity has been given to President Eisenhower's list of preferred candidates and to the preferences of the Democratic and Republican senators and representatives in Congress. But the main question is not who President Eisenhower or the congressmen favor, but who the governors and political bosses of the several states are likely to favor.

This is the reason why Vice President Richard M. Nixon on the Republican side and Sens. John Kennedy and Hubert Humphrey on the Democratic side are quietly concentrating on building support at the state level.

Sen. Kennedy, working closely with Gov. Abraham Ribicoff of Connecticut, already has reasonable assurance of support from all the Democratic governors in the New England states and is working hard on the political bosses in those large states such as New York and Illinois, where the Democrats do not have governors.

Nixon likewise is maintaining close contact with the Republican governors throughout the Union and with the Republican state chairmen in those areas, such as the South, where the Republicans are not in power.

Accordingly, much of the publicity originating in Washington about the 1960 campaign is perhaps less important than it seems.

At Malcolm X's, the Johns Hopkins political science professor now on President Eisenhower's staff, has recently pointed out, the nominations of Alfred Smith

Ike Lands In Georgia In Storm

The decision was made in the air to go on to the Valdosta area.

Humphrey, former Secretary of the Treasury, accompanied by William E. Robinson of New York, president of the Coca-Cola Co., also rushed from Moultrie to the Valdosta base to meet the President. Eisenhower was accompanied by Barry Leithead, head of Cluett-Peabody, and his personal physician, Dr. Howard Snyder.

White House Press Secretary James Haggerty announced here that Eisenhower will send his long-awaited civil rights message to Congress Thursday.

On this, his sixth visit to Thomasville and his 27th to Georgia since being elected President, Eisenhower hopes to get out in the woods and fields Thursday in search of quail.

The hope, of course, is for fairer weather to permit this, following two days of heavy rain in this area.

On arriving at Milestone just at dusk, the President found azaleas, redbud and camellias in bloom.

Thursday night the President relaxed at bridge with Humphrey, Leithead and Robinson. rights he will attempt to expand

AF Plane Lost, 12 Men Aboard

HAMILTON, Bermuda (AP) — A U.S. B-50 weather reconnaissance plane with 12 men aboard lost contact with its base here Wednesday and is missing, the Air Force reported.

Kindley Air Force Base officials said it is possible the four-engine plane simply lost radio contact with the base while collecting weather data.

The officials said a Japanese freighter reported an aircraft crashed in the ocean Wednesday morning at a point about 300 miles northwest of Bermuda.

the effect of the Senate's action cutting the new funds to $150,000,000.

If the House action stands, this item alone would unbalance the budget. The other items in the Democratic housing bills would mainly affect future years.

GOPS GET SHOWDOWN

Republicans in the House managed to get a roll-call showdown on the $300,000,000 item, in the form of a motion to recommit the bill with instructions to strike it out. The motion was debated heatedly on partisan grounds. And it lost by 277 to 123.

Only two Democrats voted with the minority, while 20 Republicans voted to keep the money in the bill.

The House will act in a few days on an omnibus bill containing all the other housing items.

In the Senate the veterans and other provisions were combined in one bill. The tests there came rapidly.

A BULGE IN 1960

The first vote was on a motion by Sen. Capehart (R-Ind.) to substitute the administration bill for the Democratic-sponsored bill. The money totals in the bills are somewhat misleading, but in general, the administration bill would call for about $1,000,000,000 less spending over the next six years. The big difference would be in fiscal 1960, the next budget year, and fiscal 1961.

this would be going into "hypothetical situations, and very deeply so."

Other observers noted the plane may have been coming in too low, among numerous other possibilities. For instance, a flight safety foundation report has cited frequent "sensory illusions of pilots" coming in over water in the dark, causing them to think they are higher than they are.

Possible failure of altimeter instruments would have to be explored. There was a rumor in some aviation quarters that another airliner had experienced a sudden down draft in the area at just about the same time.

Fluet headed a team of 35 investigators from the federal board.

District Attorney Frank D. O'Connor of Queens also started an inquiry.

SURVIVE

In Washington, the House of Representatives Commerce Committee called Lieutenant Gen. Elwood R. Quesada, retired, head of the Federal Aviation Agency, to report on the accident at a closed session Friday. Chairman Oreu Harris, Democrat of Arkansas, said the committee would also inquire generally into jet safety problems.

The only survivors were eight-year-old Robert Sullivan, of Hempstead, N.Y., whose father, mother and two sisters were killed; four other passengers and three of the five crew members—the co-pilot, the flight engineer and a stewardess.

The survivors were all rescued by the 10-man crew of a New Haven, Conn., tugboat, the H. Thomas Teti Jr.

TUG CREW CITED

"But for their tireless efforts," Police Commissioner Stephen P. Kennedy said, "perhaps these people would not have survived."

But Everett Phelps, 46, of Arlington, Vt., co-captain of the tug, unhappily noted that other tugboats might have been in the area under normal conditions. The New York Harbor's own tugs have been idled by a strike.

The crash was the first for a Lockheed Electra, a $1,700,000 airliner which uses its jet exhaust to turn a turbine wheel that is connected to propellers.

American Airlines put the craft into service between New York and Chicago Jan. 23—only 12 days before the crash.

The Electra's pilot, Capt. Albert H. De Witt, of Decatur, Mich., lost his life. He had been with American since 1929, logging more than 27,000 flying hours and 7,000,000 miles in that time. He had taken 40 hours of training in Electras before making a scheduled flight, and made at least five New York-Chicago round trips in the new plane.

Capt. De Witt would have been 60 years old in May, and under company policy would then have been retired. The Civil Aeronautics Administration said there was no age limit for commercial pilots, and the only health requirement is that they pass a physical examination every six months.

4 Clergymen Among N.Y. Plane Dead

NEW YORK (AP)—Four clergymen were among those lost in the crash of the Chicago-to-New York airliner.

Three were traveling together in connection with their work for a Methodist organization. The other was a Lutheran returning home from a clerical visit to Illinois.

The pastors were:
The Rev. Francis E. McGrath, 31, pastor of Bethany Lutheran Church in Elmhurst, Queens.

The Rev. William A. Meadows, 39, director of radio and TV services for the Methodist television, radio and film commission, and a member of the church's Michigan conference. He lived in Nashville, Tenn.

The Rev. W. Carlisle Walton Jr., 41, of Nashville, Tenn., director of ministry for the Methodist television, radio and film commission.

The Rev. Walton was married to a former Atlantan, the former Miss Mary Jane Person. Mrs. Walton's mother, Mrs. Charles E. Person, lives at 269 Peachtree Way, N.E.

The Rev. Royer H. Woodburn, 46, also was affiliated with the Methodist television, radio and film commission. He was director of utilization and field services, and was a member of the Minnesota Methodist Conference

Tower Break Spurs 'Negligence' Probe

Fulton County Sheriff T. Ralph Grimes said Wednesday he had begun an investigation into the escape of five prisoners from Fulton Tower with the view of suspending any deputy whose negligence contributed to the break.

Two of the escapees remained at large. They were Lloyd Bass, 34, formerly of a Juniper Street, NE, address, serving 10 to 20 years for involuntary manslaughter, and Richard Thomas, 23, serving 18 to 20 years for robbery.

Two escapees surrendered at the Tower soon after the break, stating simply: "We're sorry for what we did." They were Bobby R. Parrish, 27, of a Waddell Street, NE, address, and Willie F. Twilley, 22, of a Capitol Avenue, SW, address.

THIRD ESCAPEE CAUGHT

The fifth prisoner, Thomas J. Chadwick, 20, of a Baker Street, NW, address, was arrested on Peachtree Street.

Grimes said the preliminary investigation indicated that guards might have been negligent in that they failed to carry out Tower inspection rules. However, he said no definite action would be taken until he and chief jailer Carl Smithwick had gone into the matter thoroughly.

The sheriff said he was told that Bass made a telephone call from the third floor of the Tower shortly before the break. He added, in his opinion, Bass telephoned to a young woman who drove a car into the Tower patio to pick up Bass and Thomas.

SLID 75 FEET
Bass climbed through a small hole in the Tower wall first and slid 75 feet down a rope ladder made of bedsheets, Grimes related. He said Thomas followed and the two of them were gone before Parrish, Twilley and Chadwick slid down.

Jail deputies told of having heard a pecking or scraping sound a few hours before the break. They said they discussed the matter and finally decided the noise resulted from a conveyor belt in a milling company next door.

Evidently the noise was from the prisoners removing bricks from the Tower wall.

GRIMES NOTES CUT BARS

Grimes said he was more concerned with why deputies failed to find the cut bars on cell block 3-north, the Tower's maximum security cell. He added he failed to see how the inspection rules could have been carried out without revealing the cut bars.

Vandiver Honored by Crusaders

Gov. Vandiver has been named honorary state chairman of the Georgia Crusade for Freedom Organization, which launched this week its annual state campaign for voluntary contributions to help support the anti-Communist operations of Radio Free Europe.

A. Carl Kitchian, vice president and general manager of Lockheed Aircraft's Georgia Division, also announced that six Atlanta businessmen have been named to the Crusade's state committee.

They are John O. Chiles, president, Adams-Cates Co.; L. F. Montgomery, chairman, Atlanta Coca-Cola Bottling Co.; Otis O. Rae, vice president, Westinghouse Electric Corp.; John J. McDonough, president, Georgia Power Co.; J. Leonard Reinsch, executive director, WSB radio and television, and Joseph Seitz, president, Colonial Stores, Inc.

Gordon Jones, president of the Fulton National Bank of Atlanta, earlier had been named state treasurer.

Other members of the state committee include R. G. McCamy of Dalton, C. W. Curry of Columbus, and Maynard R. Ashworth of Columbus.

Reichert to Talk To Bird Club On Binoculars

R. J. Reichert will discuss "Binoculars for Birding" at the Tuesday meeting of the Atlanta Bird Club.

The speaker will cover how to use your glass to best advantage, how to choose a model best suited to your purposes and how to check a glass.

Reichert, who is from Mount Vernon, N.Y., will also show some color slides taken through binoculars.

The meeting will be held at 7:30 p.m. at the Atlanta Public Library.

City Issues Permit For 22-Story Mart

Permit for construction of a $5,600,000 first unit of a giant merchandising mart at Peachtree and Harris streets, NE, was issued Wednesday by Building Inspector William R. Wolford.

The 22-story structure will rise 291 feet above street level, only three feet short of the Fulton National Bank Building, tallest in Atlanta. John Portman, president of Atlanta Merchandising Mart, Inc., said the completed improvement will cost between $10 million and $12 million.

Marquee Falls; 2 Die, 20 Hurt

QUEBEC (AP)—The collapse of a store marquee killed two persons and injured more than a score Wednesday.

The marquee, of reinforced concrete, was almost 15 feet wide and extended along the sidewalk, in front of the Maurice Pollack department store. L-shaped steel braces held it to the building. It apparently gave way under the weight of snow and decorations erected for Quebec's Winter Carnival.

Jarrell Describes Sputnik Revolution

When the Russian Sputnik orbited, it triggered a shift in emphasis on education in America from "quantitative to qualitative," Miss Ira Jarrell, city school superintendent, Wednesday told a joint committee studying Atlanta high school curriculum.

Miss Jarrell praised members of the citizens and professional committees attending the joint session and "all those cooperating to help us develop a program to meet the needs of a changing world."

Miss Jarrell spoke at the final presentation of existing curriculum in high schools. The joint committee is attempting to re-examine the local program and will file recommendations regarding any proposed changes.

Subcommittees from the joint group will begin their studies next week. They will be climaxed at a meeting set for 3:30 p.m. March 11 on the 13th floor of the city hall.

Dr. Rual Stephens, deputy school superintendent, heads up the study, with Mark Hule, director of instruction, heading the professional committee, and Claude Grizzard Jr., the citizens' group.

Professionals Wednesday described courses and activities in counseling and guidance and in social studies and the athletic, military, health and physical education programs.

Among those making the presentations were Dr. Warren Findley, assistant superintendent for pupil personnel services; Howard

V. Mumford of Roosevelt high school; Sid Scarborough, director of athletics, military and physical education; Mrs. Margaret Mahan of Sylvan Hills and Grady high school; and Henry Grady high school.

ATLANTA AREA BILLS

Emeritus Status For Judge Cleared

A joint meeting of Fulton and DeKalb County legislators Wednesday paved the way for passage of a bill to give emeritus status to Chief Judge Luke Arnold of Atlanta Municipal Court.

DeKalb Rep. James A. Mackay said DeKalb legislators withdrew their "hold" on the bill—which would let Judge Arnold draw a $2,400 salary in addition to a pension on retirement—because Fulton legislators were in agreement on it.

Mackay said that although he has his "own opinions" about the bill, the DeKalb delegation has had a policy of "exercising our veto power only when there is an indisputable case" for opposing a matter.

The delegation previously had held up the measure because of strong opposition to it from City Attorney Jack Savage.

Freeing of the measure means it probably will pass the House Thursday and be sent to the Senate. The DeKalb delegation also dropped a "hold" which had been placed on a bill annexing a parcel of property in Atlanta to East Point.

Mackay said the action clears the way for passage of all bills affecting Atlanta which have been introduced so far by the Fulton delegation.

The Fulton delegation still is not in agreement on bills sought by the Atlanta Board of Education to give the board its own attorney, raise monthly pay of board members to $300 and let the school board rather than the board of aldermen fill school board vacancies between elections.

Smith feels a majority vote would be sufficient to override the permits.

The two-delegation meeting also brought out that no legislation can be passed this session to provide a home rule study commission or a joint metropolitan government study commission which also would take up DeKalb County problems.

Sen. Charlie Brown of Atlanta suggested the joint study group and asked Rep. Mackay, who has said DeKalb will offer a bill for a DeKalb Local Government Commission, to draw it up. Mackay pointed out, however, that no legal advertisements had been run on intention to create the home rule study group and thus there is no legal basis for a joint study.

In another Atlanta legislation development, Fulton Reps. Wilson Brooks and Ralph McClelland cleared the way Wednesday for House action on two bills which Rep. Smith had introduced. Smith later asked a committee to withhold action on the bills.

The two legislators got the Judiciary Committee to refer to a subcommittee on which they serve two bills to let defendants in criminal cases testify under oath and to let judges set sentences in such cases. They got approval Wednesday on the measures by both the subcommittee and the main committee.

Brooks and McClelland said the delegation had agreed to sponsor the two bills, along with one to extend terms of grand juries, at the request of the Fulton County Grand Jurors Assn. Smith introduced the first two measures, however, without their signatures, then asked the committee to hold them up till later.

The two legislators said they hope to get similar committee approval on the grand jury term extension bill.

Amending Of Day-Old Law Asked

A bill to amend one of the administration measures which Gov. Vandiver signed into law Tuesday was introduced in the Georgia House Wednesday.

It would amend Act No. 2 of 1959, which created the governor's Commission on Constitutional Government to replace the Georgia Commission on Education.

The amendment would provide that the operating expense of the commission would be paid out of the legislative appropriation. The original bill provided for payment out of the appropriation for the governor's office.

"It requires a good deal of money," Vandiver commented at a news conference, and we didn't have enough in our appropriation."

Vandiver signed nine measures into law Wednesday, including the bill setting maximum age limits of 21 and 25 years for admission to undergraduate or graduate work in units of the University System.

The only non-administration measure approved by the governor was the once-controversial bill increasing authorized length of trucks on Georgia highways from 48 to 50 feet.

Others approved included bills to abolish the Georgia Education Commission and to abolish or transfer duties of six minor boards.

City Housing For Colleges Is Proposed

Municipal housing authorities would be able to provide dormitory-type housing for units of the University System of Georgia under a bill offered Wednesday by Cobb County Rep. Harold Willingham.

Approval of the measure, Willingham said, will allow the Marietta Housing Authority to provide new dormitories for Southern Technical Institute, which the state has transferred to Marietta from Chamblee.

Willingham explained that the Marietta authority had agreed to "make dormitories available to Southern Tech" students and was planning to convert existing family-type units to student use.

However, the legislator said, passage of the act would allow the authority to keep its present units and finance the new units with revenue certificates paid off by student rentals.

The bill also would allow building the dormitories on the new 125-acre campus of the school, instead of having students housed on the nearby housing authority property, Willingham added.

Legislative Highlights

These were the highlights of legislative activity Wednesday: A Senate committee in executive session approved the red-hot bill proposing to allow the tax-exempt REA to extend lines in city areas.

Administration leaders readied a bill creating a Georgia Industrial Development Administration to make up to $133 million in loans to new industries.

Conference committee report on the "honesty" bill was adopted by both houses and sent to governor.

Bill transferring Milk Commission to Agriculture department cleared Senate and went to governor.

House unanimously approved resolution calling on Congress to consider Sen. Talmadge's local school control amendment.

Cobb Rep. Willingham proposed for municipal housing authority to build facilities for Southern Tech.

Fulton and DeKalb delegations agreed to give Municipal Court Judge Luke Arnold emeritus status on retirement.

Bill Proposes Loans To Attract Industries

all loans made in conformity with limitations placed upon insurance company investments. (Handling of some funds has been criticized in the past.)

As proposed in the bill to be introduced Thursday, the GIDA would consist of the secretary of state, auditor, state superintendent of banks and two members to serve at the pleasure of the governor.

NO COMPENSATION

Members would serve without compensation but would be reimbursed for actual expenses.

Funds which would be regulated by the GIDA include the Teachers and State Employees Retirement Systems, the Peace Officers Annuity and Benefit Fund, Firemen's Pension Fund and other such agencies created by the Legislature.

At present, the teachers and state employees funds have investment boards but their investments actually are handled by local banks (C&S for teachers, First National for employees).

Comp. Gen. Zack D. Cravey serves as investment officer for the peace officers and firemen.

HELP COORDINATE

All these funds have been making some industrial development loans. However, the new agency apparently would help coordinate their activities.

Vandiver has said he is particularly interested in locating industries in areas hard hit by farm recession.

Besides promoting industry, the GIDA would be charged with:

1. Assuring the financial solvency of the various retirement programs.

2. Assuring repayment of principal and interest to the funds.

3. Guarding against lending "in any speculative manner which might endanger the rights and property" of members of the systems.

WOULD BE NULL

Any loan made without the approval of the GIDA would be "illegal, null and void."

The GIDA would be empowered to call upon various retirement systems to bear the cost of investigating the financial responsibility of prospective borrowers.

A source said the Teachers Retirement System has about $100 million in investment funds and the others about $35 million.

U.S. May Get Paid

MANILA (UPI) — The Philippines House Foreign Relations Committee Wednesday urged less dependence on American loans and called for government action on a billion dollars in claims from the United States.

3 Hearings Ordered In House

Three public hearings have been scheduled next week by committees of the House on three legislative proposals, two of which have aroused much interest.

The House Agriculture Committee has set up a hearing Monday afternoon immediately after adjournment of the day's legislative session on a bill revising the state's current fertilizer laws.

300 CONCERNS NOTIFIED

Chairman William Lanier told the committee that some 300 fertilizer concerns throughout the state have been notified about the hearing. One proposal of the bill which is causing concern is reducing tolerance on fertilizer contents from 10 to 5 per cent.

Opponents of the measure have said it will cause an increase in fertilizer prices.

The Natural Resources Committee has scheduled a hearing Tuesday, Chairman Downing Musgrove said, on a bill establishing a water pollution commission. Although backers of the measure objected Wednesday to not acting on the measure at this time, Musgrove said "enough people have requested" a hearing to grant it at this time.

GUARANTEES HEARING

"I guarantee you we will have a hearing to kill the bill."

Musgrove said the committee also would hold a hearing on bill requiring bonding of public workers. Time of that hearing was not announced.

Homestead Tax Relief Asked For the Retired

Retired persons 65 years of age or older who have annual incomes of $3,600 or less, excluding pensions and Social Security benefits, would be granted a $6,000 homestead exemption under a constitutional amendment offered in the House by DeKalb Rep. W. Hugh McWhorter.

"We've got a lot of people because of this inflation who are really hurting, trying to get by on $200 or $300 a month," McWhorter said. His measure won't cost the state anything since it does not have an ad valorem tax and probably won't cost municipalities very much, he added.

The bill would affect taxable years beginning after Dec. 31, 1960.

He Wants To Boost Poultry and Peaches

If Rep. Carl Barrett of Cherokee County has his way the 1960 Georgia license tag will proclaim this the peach AND poultry state.

Barrett, whose county is the No. 1 broiler producing county in the world, plans to introduce a bill Thursday to add poultry to peaches on the next new tags. He said he had 50 co-signers on the bill.

Smith Sees Bill on Token Integration

"Some bill will be passed to allow some token integration" this legislative session, Rep. M. M. (Muggsy) Smith told the Atlanta Voters Guild Wednesday night.

Smith said that recent statements by Georgia House Floor Leader Frank Twitty of Mitchell County indicated that there would be legislation coming out of the current legislature to maintain the public school system.

Recent proposals by Sen. Talmadge also indicated that he was saying that some token integration might have to be accepted in the South and Georgia, Smith said.

4 ADDRESSED GUILD

Smith, along with Sen. Charlie Brown, Rep. Ralph McClelland and Rep. Wilson Brooks, spoke to the guild on current legislation of interest to the Atlanta area.

McClelland noted that he was preparing to ask for the General Assembly to allocate funds to reimburse Fulton County for its recent investigation into the state government.

A bill to allow city residents to pay their city and county taxes in advance installments was fully explained by Brown, who said that he was also planning to introduce legislation to bring about a separation of the registrar of voters from the office of tax commissioner all over the state.

BROOKS SPOKE ON FUNDS

Brooks spoke at length of a resolution which will bring about an amendment to the state Constitution, to allow the General Assembly to draw new allocations measures, using funds now strictly allocated to the Highway department.

Brooks said the bill would return, in some measure, legislative independence, by allowing the assembly to have a tighter control of the state's operational budget.

Transfer of Milk Control Voted 43-0 by Senate

The state Senate Wednesday approved and sent to the governor a bill transferring control of the Milk Commission to the department of agriculture. It passed, 43-0.

The House unanimously adopted a resolution calling on Congress to convene a constitutional convention to consider Sen. Talmadge's proposed amendment giving states and local communities control over their schools.

MOUNTAIN MEMORIAL

Also approved by the lower chamber was an administration bill removing the acreage and purchase-price limitations from the Stone Mountain memorial project and allowing the memorial association to issue $5 million in bonds.

A once-controversial proposal giving the State Department of Labor regulatory powers over private employment agencies—passed the House 143-0.

Rep. Wilson Brooks of Fulton said the compromise plan approved Wednesday was aimed at cleaning up "fly-by-night" agencies. It provides that agencies must be licensed, pay a $1,000 license fee and be run by persons who have been residents of the state for at least two years.

BEER BILL VOTED

The House voted to engross (make amendment-proof) a bill which would change the method of licensing beer sales in Georgia.

The bill, introduced by Rep. David L. Newton of Colquitt and others, would require a vote of city or county residents before the present status of beer sales in the affected area is changed.

At present, local governments have the power to decide whether to allow beer sales. They sometimes call advisory referenda on the matter.

In the Senate, Sen. Charlie Brown's proposal to regulate the size of numerals on outdoor gasoline advertisements was killed 32-12. But the Senate adopted the rest of Brown's bill, which would require signs to show the full price of gasoline, including taxes.

MEASURE DELAYED

The Senate Education Committee delayed until Thursday further action on a House bill which would allow a child to enter first grade if he is six years old within the calendar year.

Various Education department officials appeared before the committee Wednesday to request dates other than the Dec. 31 cutoff in the House-approved bill.

A hitch developed in the previously approved compromise report on a bill transferring the bill-drafting unit from the attorney general's office to the legislature.

Senators and Vandiver opposed

End-Atlanta Bill Sent to Own Death

Mitchell County Rep. Tom Palmer's resolution to replace the City of Atlanta with a "capital district" was formally introduced Wednesday and sent to a committee where it apparently will be killed.

When the proposal in the form of a constitutional amendment was read by House Clerk Jack Ellard, Speaker George Smith promptly sent it to the House Local Affairs Committee.

There, under local courtesy rules, the resolution can be killed by the Fulton and DeKalb County delegations by simple disagreement with its provisions.

PLANS HEARING

Committee Chairman Joe Underwood of Montgomery said the Pelham legislator's proposal "will not be treated like a regular local bill" whereby the committee chairman normally favors reports the bill out for passage. Underwood said he would set up a public hearing on the resolution.

Although not mentioning Atlanta by name, the resolution clearly refers to the city. "The General Assembly," it says, "is hereby authorized to provide by law for the creation of a 'Capital District,' embracing the area of the municipality in which the seat of the state government is located . . ."

The resolution also provides for the abolishment of the municipality in the area and the "transfer of the contractual and bonded obligations of said municipality to the state."

REFUSE COMMENT

Most local legislators said they didn't want to "dignify" the proposal with comment. But they added wryly they liked the proposal about "taking over our debt."

Palmer insisted Wednesday he is serious about his proposal. He said there have been many misinterpretations of the measure because people "read into it what they wished to."

"I have introduced it in good faith and in good faith they will act on it," he added.

Senate Panel Votes To Allow REA To Operate in Cities

A Senate committee Tuesday recommended passage of a hotly-contested bill for rural electric co-ops for the right to operate within city limits.

The action cleared the way for a second battle on the Senate floor.

The committee on public utilities and transportation went into executive session after a stormy public hearing in which both the REA and the Georgia Municipal Assn. accused each other of "encroachment."

VOTE NOT REVEALED

The committee later reported that it had recommended the bill to pass, but would not say what the vote was.

Senator Greer of Lakeland, who presided over the hearing, said a way must be worked out whereby all factions—the cities, REA and the Georgia Power Co.—would be satisfied.

He indicated the committee might try to work out some compromise to the controversial Senate Bill 30, sponsored by the rural cooperatives to allow them to serve former rural areas that are annexed by cities.

"If either side wins or loses, then all will be losers," Greer commented at the end of the hearing which attracted an estimated 300 spectators.

As a result of the committee action, however, the cooperatives were clearly victorious in the first round of the battle.

Greer pointed out that many of the speakers before the committee had indicated a spirit of "not wanting to hurt the other side, but trying to find a solution."

Some of the speeches were filled with strong charges, however.

Elmer George, executive director of the Municipal Assn., charged that the bill was part of a "national effort" with socialistic implications.

He talked about what he called "an arrogant attempt on the part of socialistically inclined leaders of electrical membership co-ops to take over the electrical industry on a national basis."

WOULD REDEFINE AREAS

Basically, the bill would "redefine" rural areas to permit the REA to provide "service drop" from existing lines which they erected in areas near cities which later annexed those areas.

George said the 1936 congressional act which established REA intended that the cooperatives could serve only in "clearly rural areas."

"The word 'rural' itself denotes this intention simply and emphatically," he said. "You can't make 'rural' areas mean 'urban' no matter how much you define it. This is fraud, pure and simple."

But D. M. Pollock of Monroe, president of the Georgia Electric Membership Cooperative, said REA hasn't "the slightest desire . . . to go into any area where it is not legally entitled to go."

Addressing representatives of several cities who were present to oppose the bill, Pollock said it wouldn't hurt their towns "to have a little competition between the REA and the Georgia Power Company."

Yield Copper Export

HAIFI, Israel (AP) — The first copper export from the Negev Desert since King Solomon's time 3,000 years ago has left Haifa Harbor.

The 618 tons of reddish brown copper cement in powder form, from recently reactivated copper works at Timnah, near Ellat, was consigned aboard the Dutch freighter Madjow to a German refinery.

Copper cement production at the Timnah works began in October. At present an annual output of 9,000 tons is expected.

Sheriffs Considering Boys Ranch for State

Establishment of a 2,600-acre boys' ranch in McIntosh County is being considered by the Sheriffs' Association of Georgia.

Sheriff Jewel Futch of Lawndale County, association president, Wednesday appointed a committee to study the possibility of acquiring the necessary land.

This action took place at the Dinkler Plaza Hotel during the association's annual business meeting. About 50 Georgia sheriffs attended.

The ranch would be for the purpose of rehabilitating juvenile delinquents, Sheriff Robert K. Broome of DeKalb, secretary, said. "Our main purposes in this association are the prevention of juvenile delinquency and to try to keep the mentally ill out of jail," Broome said.

He said most new hospitals have a detention room for mentally ill patients so they will not have to be sent to jail. "These people are sick," Broome said, "and they shouldn't be in jail."

The group also discussed the possibilities of establishing a $500 scholarship from each of the ten congressional districts for a deserving boy or girl. Sheriff Futch appointed a committee to study this project, also.

The committees are to report back to the group's annual meeting to be held in June or July.

"We are also studying another project to try to create revenue for information centers for tourists along the new super high-

The group, made up of youngsters from the third through seventh grades of seven east Atlanta schools, will present a 1½-hour concert at the conference. Following the meet, the band will go on to New Orleans for a sight-seeing tour of the city, returning to Atlanta Sunday night.

The band was selected in February at the Music Festival at Carrollton to represent the state at the Mississippi Conference.

Schools represented in the band are John B. Gordon, Anne E. West, Mary Lin, East Lake, Kirkwood, Burgess and Whiteford. The group, a symphonic band, has played at Chicago at the National Music Educators Conference in 1954 and at the American Association of School Administrators at Atlantic City, N.J., in 1956.

Bogus Detective Is Fined $25

A sewing machine store credit manager charged with posing as a detective and falsely telling a woman's relatives she was dead was fined $25 in Fulton Criminal Court Wednesday.

Judge Charles A. Wofford levied the fine after witnesses said James D. Brissett, 30, of 1041 Piedmont Ave., N.E., used the rule in an effort to locate the woman who had moved from Atlanta and owed money for her machine.

Ports Trust Ask Option Extension

Central of Georgia Railway will be asked to extend the Georgia Ports Authority's option on the Whitehall Plantation property adjoining the state docks at Savannah, Gov. Ernest Vandiver said Wednesday.

Vandiver said that he hopes the state will be able to purchase the "valuable property," but that funds for this purpose will not be available in the immediate future.

The option which expires in June, was part of a package deal the authority got when it bought the Central of Georgia's docks property last November.

WILL ASK EXTENSION

Vandiver told reporters at his press conference that he will ask the ports authority to request a 12- or 18-month extension of the option.

In reply to other questions about the ports authority, Vandiver said the Savannah state docks insurance will be divided among Savannah insurance agents. Under the Griffin administration, George P. Whitman Jr., State Board of Education chairman, got all the ports insurance business and split more than $20,000 in insurance commissions with Harry P. Shore, Savannah meat dealer and brother-in-law of Robert Frankel, who was authority chairman.

Vandiver said the same policy will be followed for state dock facilities in Augusta, Brunswick and Bainbridge. He added that only "men who have been in the insurance business for a period of years" will get any of the state's insurance business.

VANDIVER CONTINUED

On other matters, Vandiver told newsmen:

1. Revenue Commissioner Oxford was making an "educated guess" when he said the state may be able to increase sales tax collections by $25,000,000 through strict enforcement. "I hope he's right," the governor added.

2. He will review "very closely" the water resources commission bill because it will entail additional state expenditures. He said that if the anti-pollution measure passes both Houses, he will give careful study to it before deciding whether to sign it.

3. Changes made by a conference committee on the "honesty bill" strengthened the legislation.

4. The State Law department has assured him the state is on safe legal grounds in moving to collect back sales taxes from transit companies.

Hotel Here Sued In Slaying of Diamond Dealer

Mrs. Fabius Frankel Wednesday filed a $200,000 damage suit against the management of an Atlanta hotel where her husband, a 60-year-old New York diamond merchant, was mysteriously slain.

Frankel, on a sales trip, was found tied to a chair and fatally beaten at the Georgia Hotel on Luckie street, Nov. 16, 1957. His murder has never been solved, although rewards totaling $105,000 have been posted.

His widow alleged that the hotel management, Georgian Enterprises, Inc., was negligent in that the robbers and murderers were able to obtain a pass key to the room and that employees noticed strange men on the floor and failed to report them.

The suit said Frankel at the time of his death was capable of earning at least $25,000 a year as a diamond dealer and cutter.

It was the second suit resulting from his death. Frankel's widow and two nephews and business partners, Bernard and Henry Frankel, in June sued the hotel for $15,018 as the value of diamonds stolen from him.

PETITION PUSHERS — WASHINGTON — This group of men and women filed a petition with House clerk's office here Wednesday calling for impeachment of Chief Justice Earl Warren and other members of the U.S. Supreme Court. The 1,500 foot long petition containing names of persons from all sections of the nation carried a chart on the back of each petition page which read: "How the Present Members of the U.S. Supreme Court Voted on Issues Involving Communism."

GM Files Ordered In Probe

DETROIT (AP)—The U.S. Justice Department, broadening an investigation into what it termed "undue concentration" in the automobile industry, Wednesday subpoenaed records of General Motors Corp.

Frederic G. Donner, GM board chairman, said the subpoena called for "a tremendous amount of information, records and reports" going back to 1948.

"In view of the complexity of this request it obviously requires considerable study and analysis on our part," Donner said. "We have not had an opportunity to examine the subpoena in detail."

He said he felt he could not comment further while the investigation continued.

In Washington, a Justice Department spokesman said the investigation had been under way "quite some time."

"We are going in a little deeper now," said Victor R. Hansen, an assistant attorney general.

Hansen emphasized, however, that no conclusions have been reached. "No legal action is now in preparation for filing," he said. "We are going very carefully, we must get all the facts."

Hansen told of the investigation while testifying before a Senate

40 Weddings Illegal —JP Calls for Help

HARTFORD, Conn. (AP)—The Connecticut legislative bill was a simple request to validate a few acts of Justice of the Peace Frank Lewis of East Hartford.

As explained at a state legislative hearing here Tuesday Lewis had not been made aware he was legally bound to vacate his office when he reached the age of 70 last March.

The Legislature was asked to validate about 40 marriages performed by Lewis, which at the moment, are invalid.

House Economic Committee. He also said an investigation of the steel industry was under way.

He said the Justice Department believes enforcement of antitrust laws will bring supply, demand and price into more normally competitive relationship in such new and growing industries as chemicals, plastics and electronics.

"By so doing we would avoid—a decade or so from now—that pattern of undue concentration which today plagues autos and steel," he said.

Soviet Sub Production Believed Slowing Down

(Copyright, 1958, The New York Times Co.)

WASHINGTON—The Soviet Union has reduced substantially its production of submarines, according to the latest military intelligence estimates.

The United States, in interpreting these estimates and its observations at sea, has revised downward the calculated size of the Soviet submarine fleet.

The new figure is 450 submarines. This would leave the Soviet undersea force still the largest in the world.

BURKE REPORTED 474

Last June, Adm. Burke, chief of naval operations, reported the estimate of Soviet submarines to be 474. The estimated reduction is equal to more than one-fifth of the entire U.S. operational submarine fleet of 112.

In disclosing the revised estimates, Rear Adm. Charles Weakley told this reporter that U.S. forces never have positively identified a Soviet submarine in or near U.S. coastal waters.

That included, he said, distances 1,000 to 1,500 miles from the U.S. shores and not merely the 3-mile territorial waters.

Adm. Weakley is the anti-submarine warfare readiness executive at the Pentagon.

REPORTS DIFFER

His statement ran counter to recent published reports that Soviet submarines have been seen frequently cruising near U.S. waters.

Jane's Fighting Ships, the authoritative guide published in Britain, said last December that there had been an upsurge of Soviet submarine activity in the Atlantic and off the east coast of the United States.

Jane's also noted a reduction in Soviet submarine production but estimated the size of Moscow's submarine fleet at about 500.

Weakley's statement was also notable in that it was made when Congress is taking testimony on military appropriations. Navy officials often have been the subject of sarcasm when reports of Soviet submarine sightings appeared at budget time.

The downward revision of estimated Soviet submarine strength coincided with the downward revision of Soviet capacity to produce intercontinental ballistic missiles and last year's downward revision of estimated Soviet bomber strength.

The congressional missile hearings lately have been featured by charges, denied by defense officials, that some intelligence revisions have been prompted by the Administration's desire to hold down the defense budget.

Weakley suggested three reasons why the Soviet Union had curtailed submarine production: The Soviet leaders had decided they had enough submarines, they were changing over to a newer type, and finally they were preparing to build a nuclear-powered submarine fleet.

He recalled that Soviet officials in 1948 had announced they would build 1,200 submarines. They did not start submarine production in earnest until 1950. In 1957, the rate of production was 100 a year, he added.

Since then, however, evidence has been received of a slowdown in submarine building.

The Soviets do not yet appear to have any nuclear powered submarines, although they do have a nuclear-powered ice-breaker.

AUTO PLOUGHS INTO FRUIT STORE AS DRIVER DIES OF HEART ATTACK
Phil Kennedy Is Dead at Scene; Peachtree Road Store Owner Puts Damage at $3,000

Driver Stricken, Dies; Car Rams Into Store

An Atlanta insurance salesman Wednesday died when his out-of-control automobile veered across the street, jumped the curbing and smashed into a fruit store at 2369 Peachtree Rd., NE.

Philip G. Keeney, 53, of 1296 McLendon Ave., NE, was pronounced dead at the scene, Detectives E. F. McKillop and Harry McCollister said. Relatives said Mr. Keeney, who had had a heart condition for two years, apparently died of a heart attack.

Fred Golden, 59, owner of Fred's Fruit Emporium, was knocked about 20 feet by the runaway car but was only slightly injured.

Damage estimated at $3,000 was caused as the car scattered an ice box, counters and food items in all directions, Mr. Golden said.

A witness, J. H. Grace, of 1738 Valencia Rd., Decatur, said that he was driving south on Peachtree Rd. when he saw an oncoming car strike the curbing, veer across the street, hurdle the curbing and crash into the store, police reported.

SEEMED TO SLUMP

The driver appeared to be slumped against the steering wheel while the car was out of control, detectives said they were told.

A native of Atlanta, Mr. Keeney had been employed by the Mutual of Omaha Insurance Co. 18 years. He was a member of Lodge No. 78, BPOE. He was a communicant of the St. Thomas More Roman Catholic Church.

The Rosary will be said at 8 p.m. Thursday at Spring Hill.

SERVICES FRIDAY

Funeral services will be at 3 p.m. Friday at Spring Hill. The Rev. Joseph Drohan will officiate. Burial will be in Westview Cemetery.

Survivors are his wife, the former Anne Edwards of Teococ; two sons, Patrick and Michael Keeney, both of Atlanta; four sisters, Mrs. B. R. Griffin, Ft. Walton Beach, Fla., and Mrs. Kathleen Marshall, Mrs. John Hoffman and Mrs. G. T. Walsh, all of Atlanta, and four brothers, Charles M. Keeney, Albany; Joseph E. Keeney, Atlanta; Hugh B. Keeney, Miami, Fla., and Vincent D. Keeney, N. Merrick, Long Island, N.Y.

Car, Truck Crash, Kill Austell Man

A Cobb County man was killed Wednesday and his brother-in-law seriously injured in the collision of an automobile and a tractor-trailer on the Bankhead Highway, police said.

John William Causey Jr., 19, of Austell, driver of the auto, was killed in the crash at Midway, two miles east of Austell, Cobb Patrolmen J. W. Reeves and Buck Hicks said.

Causey's brother-in-law, Floyd Gilland, 23, also of Austell, a passenger in the car, was admitted to the Austell Hospital with injuries to the head and knees.

Patrolmen said they were told the car spun out of control on the rain-slicked highway and crashed into a tractor-trailer driven by John Floyd, 27, of 1620 Foote St., NE. They added Floyd was not injured.

The tractor-trailer swerved into a ditch after the collision but did not overturn, patrolmen related. They said the car was demolished.

MUST REST

Bob Hope Put in Bed By Eye Clot

HOLLYWOOD, Calif. (AP)—Bob Hope has a blood clot in his left eye, his doctor said Wednesday. He has been ordered to rest.

Hope, on the doctor's advice, canceled a charity show appearance Thursday night in Miami.

"We don't want him traveling," said his physician. "We want him where we can watch him."

He said the ailment is not painful but causes blurred vision.

"It's a clot in a vein in the cornea," the physician said. "It's just like a clot anywhere. It's what happens when a vein gets stopped up."

The doctor said all other tests of Hope's health "were real good." He said rest and treatment should bring quick improvement.

Judge Rebukes Wife Reneging On Stab Story

Fulton Criminal Court Judge Charles A. Wofford Wednesday strongly scolded a woman who refused to testify against her husband in a stabbing case for wasting the time of the court, solicitor and police officers.

Mrs. Virginia Starr, who had accused her husband, Frank, of stabbing her, was warned she would be held in contempt and jailed if she did it again.

Judge Wofford accused Mrs. Starr of acting in "bad faith in misusing judicial process for personal vengeance."

Emory Allotted U.S. Fellowships

Emory University has been selected as one of the first 48 colleges and universities in the nation to receive fellowships for graduate study under the recently approved National Defense Education Act.

Emory officials said they had been advised by Lawrence G. Derthick, U.S. commissioner of education, that Emory will be allotted three fellowships for graduate study of the Old Testament.

The new act authorizes 1,000 fellowships in an effort to augment the nation's supply of college teachers and scholars. Federal funds have been approved for the first 160 graduate fellowships at a cost of about $400,000.

RAIN CAN'T DAMPEN QUEEN'S SMILE
Maid of Cotton, Malinda Berry Arrives in Atlanta

'59 Cotton Queen Has Royal Smile

By RAYMONDE ALEXANDER
Constitution Fashion Editor

An air-sick young lady dropped with the rain-drops into Atlanta yesterday and proved she is already an accomplished good will ambassador even though she has only been an official one since last December.

In just over a month, Miss Malinda Diggs Berry has gone from college girl to cotton queen and, now on her second city as the 1959 Maid of Cotton, she displays a poise and manner you could expect only of royalty.

Flashing a quick smile and dancing blue eyes, she said excitedly that she was having a good time, not looking to the future, and expecting only to be a certified history teacher when all the glamour of the cotton tour is over.

"All of these bags are full of books," she laughed, "and even though I will visit 27 cities as fashion ambassador of the American cotton industry, I am continuing my studies by correspondence. I expect to graduate from Oklahoma State University one year from now."

In addition to her American tour, Miss Berry will be the first Maid of Cotton to travel completely around the world, adding the Far East to the European itinerary of previous years.

VERY FEMININE

Feminine almost to the point of looking delicate, Miss Berry is a Stillwater, Okla., native. She is 5 feet 6 inches tall, weighs 125 pounds and will be 21 years old in March. The page-boy turn of her brown hair curled softly around her fair cheeks as she turned quickly from side to side to smile at her Atlanta greeters.

While she is visiting Atlanta, she will be guest of honor and star in the fashion show at the Cotton Cotillion sponsored for the benefit of children patients by the Women's Auxiliary of the Henrietta Eggleston Memorial Hospital to be held Thursday evening at the Cherokee Town Club.

Speaking of clothes, Miss Berry said that she loves the ensemble look and many of the 43 designs created by the American couturiers especially for her sport, day and evening wear are the costume variety.

PUBLIC SHOWS

Friday she will appear before the public in fashion shows at Davison's presenting spring fabrics styled by McCall patterns. These will be styles that you can make yourself and one of those to be worn by Miss Berry is the drawstring Empire waistline sheath in awning stripe cotton of orange, flecked brown and olive green.

Miss Berry became very coy with the mention of boy friends and vowed she doesn't have a special one.

"But I know the kind I want—a good boy, smart in more ways than one," she whispered.

When she isn't being the Maid of Cotton much of her spare time is filled with swimming and dolls. Her collection of dolls has now reached 100 and she expects to add to it on her tour—"especially in Europe and the Far East."

What Is the Legislature? The Sweet Things Squealed

In spite of all women have contributed to public affairs in this age of wonders, there's still a fairly prevalent notion that the real womanly woman finds politics a subject too weighty for her sweet little bird brain.

Sometimes this irritates me a little. And then I realize it's like being on the edge of understanding a joke, the point of which everybody else has already grasped and is enjoying lustily. For, of course, it is a right pleasant joke.

Who does understand politics, for goodness sake? Half the men engaged in this wonderful, baffling, endlessly fascinating circus don't understand it either.

To prove that women are little dunces about such matters, people—usually men but occasionally a woman—tell amusing stories about girls of their acquaintance who have demonstrated a wide-eyed childish ignorance of the simple processes of government. One that I found entertaining on a recent trip with the Legislature was Mrs. Garland Byrd's tale of her first brush with politics.

She was a college senior and engaged to Garland when he telephoned her one day that he was planning to run for the Legislature. She said she squealed with delight and excitement and rushed to tell her room-mates, who also squealed with delight and excitement. And then a hush fell on the group and one of the girls asked, "What is the Legislature?"

Pretty Gloria Byrd, who today probably rates next to Betty Vandiver as one of the most natural and charming politicians in the state, said she hadn't the foggiest idea.

"One of the girls who was majoring in government spoke up," Gloria related, "and said, 'I THINK it's something in Washington.'"

Well, of course, you can be shocked if you want to, that college seniors didn't then and probably don't now, fully understand the nomenclature for these various lawmaking bodies. But it doesn't bother me a bit. Learning which is the Georgia House and which is the Senate and how they differ from the state's chambers of the U.S. Congress is a snap compared to some of the things women have to know. If they ever get interested they pick up these minor details more rapidly than they learn which is the pickle shelf and which is the soap powder shelf in the supermarket.

What's more important than the processes of government is people—the people governing and the people governed. And I believe women have a natural aptitude in this direction. When they put their minds to electing good officials and to working for good laws they are extremely effective.

Until they get interested it suits them to act as if the whole subject of government were a deep and impenetrable morass in which only a great big strong, brilliant man can travel safely.

A legislative leader I like very much shocked me a little when he told me recently that he had finally reached the point where he will trust his wife to mark a ballot on election day. "But I control the politics in my family," he said with impressive finality. "That's my department and I tell all the voters in the family how to vote."

In the middle of berating him as a dictator I happened to remember his smart, intelligent wife and I relaxed. Her contribution to his political career has undoubtedly been considerable and if the day ever comes when he tells her to vote for somebody she doesn't like or trust there may be a gentle, bloodless, smiling revolution in that family.

Buds Replace Rugby For 'Bama Irishman

By YOLANDE GWIN

A flower never says the wrong thing. It can say I love you, I congratulate you, I miss you so, get well soon, bon voyage and a safe return, take care of yourself, you belong to me or may the good Lord bless you and keep you 'til we meet again.

"Few stop in their busy schedule to realize that flowers have indeed entwined themselves into our American way of life," said Ian Stuart, a naturalized American from Dublin, Ireland, who now lives in Birmingham, Ala.

Mr. Stuart has been in town talking to civic groups, to high school students and various other groups, whose interests vary but whose roots are the same—American.

A BIG MAN

A big man, he wears his glasses attached to a fishing gut line about his neck. He is a former sports writer for the London Daily Express and said in an interview Wednesday that he introduced rugby to the famous Harrow School in England when he was a member of the faculty. He is one of few British athletes who holds the equivalent of our "all-American" in two sports, track and rugby football. He was selected for the British rugby team which toured South Africa.

You'd think that this big hunk of a man would be talking about sports and the classics—after all he has written many books and nine plays called "The Simplified Shakespeare Series." But no. He talked of what flowers can do for you.

"I do believe our Creator, behind whose every act there's meaning and purpose, decked the earth with flowers to help us give utterance to feelings when it's hardest to find words."

Mr. Stuart is known throughout the nation as "Old Mercury," the emblem of the Florists Telegraph Delivery Assn. of which he is community relations director. The FTD is the oldest and largest non-profit making organization of its kind in the world.

PRIVATE ENTERPRISE
"Florists represent what's best in the spirit and system of private enterprise. Owners of small businesses, free and independent operators, rugged individualists, theirs is the spirit that made the nation great," he said.

Let's Go Marketing—

More Piggies Are Going To the Market This Year

VIRGINIA DYSARD KEZIAH

Constitution Food Editor

"This little piggy went to market; this little piggy stayed home." But all in all the piggies have been going more this year than staying. Current pork marketings are from the fall pig crop which is estimated to be about 17 per cent larger than a year ago.

All cuts of fresh pork offer good values. More attractive prices are on pork loins (whole or half), bacon and sausage, reports Mrs. Betty Alexander, extension consumer information specialist. Also many stores are featuring other pork cuts as specials.

Most beef cuts are expected to continue at about present price levels during the next few weeks. Chuck roast and round steak represent the better choices in beef cuts in most of the markets. Lamb prices are steady.

Eggs are likely to be offered at special prices the next week or two. Large size eggs remain the best values, being only 5 cents higher than medium-sized ones. There is very little change in the broiler-fryer price picture.

TURKEY ABUNDANT
Supplies of turkeys through May are expected to be up by as much as 50 per cent for the same period last year. This does not mean to shippers that these turkeys will be selling at rock bottom prices, this does mean that supplies are abundant, and, because of the good supply, they will likely cost less as compared to what you have been paying.

High quality celery, wearing cheap price tags, is coming to the market. Cabbage is down in price this week and quality is good. Green and pole beans are retarded by the recent frost in Florida with increase in price expected this week. Next week things may level off.

Cucumbers, corn and peppers are holding at last week's prices, with rain and weather conditions causing low production. Tomatoes are down in price from last week, and quality is improved. Yellow Spanish onions rate as bargains while white onions and the Italian onions have advanced in price. Greens rate as budget buys, along with potatoes, both Irish and sweet. Consider canned peas as an economical main dish.

CITRUS PLENTIFUL
Three things make grapefruits and oranges an outstanding value on the market. They are good eating quality, plentiful supplies and attractive prices. Temple and Navel oranges are the leading varieties on the market now. Tangerines and tangelos are about gone.

Avocados are top values in many of the markets—quality is extremely good. Anjou pears are reasonably priced in stores, and banana quality is excellent with prices at last week's level. Apples (winesaps, Rones, delicious) continue to present good values in bulk or bags. Be sure to store apples in the refrigerator to hold quality at home.

A billion or more cans of peas is a super-abundant supply! That's what we have for 1959. So, it's a good time to include peas in your menu and stock your pantry shelf with canned peas, for processors and food stores are offering specials.

When you choose canned peas, check can size. Green peas are most often purchased in cans containing one pound of peas or the No. 303 can containing 2 cups or 4 1/2-cup servings. A smaller popular size is an 8 1/2-oz. can containing 1 cup or 1 1/2-cup servings.

The label on the can may tell you size—tiny, small, medium or large. If peas are not graded for size, the label should say blended or field-run.

Canned peas are of two types: Early peas or early maturing or smooth-skin varieties. Sweet peas or sugar peas of later maturing, wrinkled varieties which have a natural sweet flavor.

Fresh and canned cooked peas make significant contributions to the nutritive level of our diets, because we eat them frequently. From one-half cup of peas you get good percentages of recommended daily allowances of calcium, iron, thiamine, vitamin A and vitamin C. The food value of peas is influenced by growing conditions, storage and methods of preparation. To retain the full food value of canned peas, cook quickly and use the liquid.

Perhaps you may like to try peas seasoned with one of these: chopped mint, minced parsley, seasoned salt, onion salt, oregano, basil, thyme or savory.

'Berkeley Square' Stars England's Miss TV

PAUL JONES' PICK OF THE DAY—The Hall of Fame, which has acquired itself with some rather unusual shows this season, probably will come up with another important presentation tonight when it presents "Berkeley Square" in color at 9:30 p.m. on NBC-TV and Channel 2.

Jeannie Carson and Edna Best will co-star with John Kerr in the 90-minute production of the hit play which will also serve to introduce to American audiences Janet Munro, England's "Miss Television of 1958." She, incidentally, is one of that country's most sought-after actresses.

The auburn-haired, green-eyed Miss Muore is being imported especially for her romantic role opposite Kerr, who will have the part created by the late Leslie Howard in the original Broadway production.

John L. Balderston's classic has been adapted especially for Hall of Fame by Theodore Epstein. It is an enchanting play based on the theory that all time—past, present and future, is one. Kerr will portray Peter Standish, a young American who inherits and occupies a mansion in London. He is transported back to 1784 and takes on the form of a forebear after whom he has been named. The play was originally presented on Broadway in 1929.

As I See It

Playhouse 90 Bets On Boy, 14, Tonight

By PAUL JONES

When Playhouse 90 started assembling a cast for tonight's production of "Child of Our Time" an order went out to film casting bureaus for a child who fits this description:

"Age range about 9-14 . . . an intelligent, sensitive boy . . . preferably not too handsome . . . must be a great actor."

The last stipulation in that casting order automatically excluded about 99 per cent of the child actors in Hollywood. For, as you know, the number of "great actors" whether 9 or 20 years old is fairly limited. I think I can list in three lines of type the names of all the "great actors" I have ever seen perform.

But Playhouse 90 might have struck gold. It remains to be seen tonight (Channel 5 at 9:30 p.m.) how "great" is the young actor selected for the pivotal role of Tanguy, whose poignant story is told in this dramatization of Michel de Castille's hit novel. The hero is a refugee from the war in Spain, separated from his mother and father and subjected to the horrors of the Nazi concentration camp.

The part which has been assigned to 14-year-old Robert Crawford, whose meatiest part to date has been an appearance in a junior high school opera, is probably one of the most demanding ever thrust upon a young actor. Robert must be on stage almost the entire 90 minutes of the production.

His selection over many better known applicants for the part is one of the most daring acts of casting in the history of television. He must not only be on stage, he must dominate the stage over older, more experienced actors who have devoted their lives to their craft.

According to the Playhouse 90 producers he bears no resemblance to the scene-stealing "enfant terrible" of Hollywood legend. In person, he is described as a quiet boy, a trifle small for his age, who smiles a great deal.

THE PLAYHOUSE staff considers him perfect for the role of the youngster-refugee in wartime Europe despite the fact that he has practically no formal training in the theater.

Director Roy Hill, who guided

Polly Bergen to an Emmy-award performance in "The Helen Morgan Story" on Playhouse 90, doesn't have any qualms about this big gamble at all.

"You never know what an unknown can do," says Hill. "Until he loses his first nervousness and really starts playing the part. And, of course, you have to take a chance on new and unproven talent in order to keep television fresh and alive. Besides, most of the undiscovered talent gives everyone a pleasant surprise."

PRODUCER HERBERT BRODWIN gives this tip to viewers:

"If Bobby surprises the viewers the way he did all of us in auditions, television will have a new star on Thursday night."

In order to watch young Bobby Crawford make his debut in this demanding part, you must pass up another production which promises to be exciting theater. "Berkeley Square" which is being presented on Channel 2 at precisely the same time that young Crawford steps before the footlights.

If you'd like to express your dissatisfaction over the way that two such worthy programs are scheduled, one opposite the other, I'd suggest that you get a hot letter off to NBC-TV and another hot letter off to CBS-TV today.

I think someone has shown mighty little consideration for the viewing public. Don't you?

MRS. THOMAS HALL CLARKE, of Atlanta, writes: "I was very excited when I saw in Newsweek that NBC was inaugurating a new series called 'Image Russia'."

I looked for it all last week in the schedule and since I saw it listed in the New York Times, I knew the program had started. I called WSB and was told they did not carry the program at 1:06 a.m.

(Ed Note: WSB is broadcasting "Image Russia" but instead of 1:06 a.m. the program is being presented at 8:30 p.m. each day, Monday through Friday. It is a really outstanding presentation.)

DIES IN CRASH—Beulah Zachry, producer of the Kukla, Fran and Ollie television program, was listed as a passenger on the American Airlines plane which plunged into the East River Tuesday night on a flight from Chicago. Her body has not been recovered.

2 Press Panels Set Sunday

NEW YORK — For the first time in its history, there will be two Meet the Press programs in one day Sunday.

The first, to be telecast on NBC-TV (Channel 2) at 4:30 p.m., is a taped interview with Pote Sarasin, secretary general of the Southeast Asia Treaty Organization.

The panel will include Pauline Frederick, NBC News' United Nations correspondent; Harry Schwartz of the New York Times; Stewart Hensley of United Press International and Krishna Balamaram of the Hindu. Lawrence Spivak is moderator.

The live Meet the Press interview with West Berlin Mayor Willy Brandt will be telecast on the NBC-TV (Channel 2) at 6 p.m.

Brandt will be interviewed in Washington by John Hightower of the Associated Press. Chalmers Roberts of the Washington Post and Times Herald, James Reston of the New York Times, and Spivak. Ned Brooks will moderate.

"Ask Washington," previously announced as returning to the air regularly, starting Feb. 8, will be telecast each Sunday at 4:30 p.m., starting Feb. 15.

Hayden's 'Ex' Will Have To Wait

By SHEILAH GRAHAM
North American Newspaper Alliance
HOLLYWOOD, Calif. — Sterling Hayden's agent, Bill Shiff-rin, tells me the defiant mariner will stay away from California ports until October. So, unless his ex-wife, Betty, wants to go to Tahiti to claim their four children, she will have to wait. Hayden is filming a TV series in the South Seas.

Bing Crosby gets time off until Feb. 9 before reporting back to his "Say One for Me" film at 20th-Fox. Bing will lose while co-stars Robert Wagner and Debbie Reynolds film their dance numbers. . . . Debbie's brother, Bill Reynolds, is living in the completely furnished bomb shelter under Debbie's house in Holmby Hills. Since the breakup with Eddie Fisher, Debbie, her secretary, and the children's nurse feel safer with a man in the house.

Julia Meade, who delivers the commercials on the Ed Sullivan show, and Gene Rayburn, who does the same for the Steve Allen show, confided that they will co-star in summer stock. Julia, who is so pretty, gives the impression she can be a good actress. . . . The recent sneak preview audience at Encino was made for Maurice Chevalier in MGM's "Count Your Blessings." This Frenchman—at 70—is still one of the screen's great charmers.

Dan Dailey wrote wife Gwen from London, where he is filming his television show, "We've had fog, smog, rain, snow, hail and sleet—a little bit of each every day." Gwen will be joining Dan next month, when the sun comes smiling through—she hopes. . . . Marc Lawrence is after Nina Foch to co-star with him in the Laguna Playhouse production of "A Street-Car Named Desire."

Orchids to Judy Holiday, from producer Arthur Freed. When

Judy comes west in the summer for the movie version of "The Bells Are Ringing," she will live in the guest house on Freed's ranch at Malibu. Wonder what happened to her romance with "Bells" leading man, Sidney Chaplin. During the early run of the play, they seemed so much in love. Now Sid marries someone else.

I hope the Oscar balloters will remember Cary Grant's marvelous performance with Ingrid Bergman in "Indiscreet." We're getting close to nomination time. If I didn't see the date, I'd still know it by the press agents who call me to boost their particular client.

Lena Horne leaves her "Jamaica" musical this spring.

THE ATLANTA CONSTITUTION, Thursday, Feb. 8, 1959 19 and then, after three night club dates — New York, Las Vegas and Hollywood's Coconut Grove — she and husband Lenny Haydon fly to France for six months. They have a home on the French Riviera.

To answer several letters asking where Elizabeth Taylor got the white dress she wore in "Cat On A Hot Tin Roof" it was designed by Helen Rose of MGM, Culver City, Calif. She can tell you where to buy same.

Jack Palance goes to Mexico this fall to star in "Passenger To Bali" for security films, the company which made a small fortune on "Gods Little Acre."

COUPLE ACCUSED OF SELLING CHILDREN
Clark Stillion and Wife Rosemarie Sit Glumly in Houston Jail

Tried To Sell Twins For $500, Couple Says

HOUSTON, Tex. (AP)—A British bride and her 24-year-old unemployed husband admitted Wednesday to reporters that they tried to sell her 8-year-old twin sons for $500.

Mr. and Mrs. Clark Dean Stillion were arrested by a detective and a policewoman who had posed as man and wife. The Stillions were charged with selling a minor child, a felony.

"We don't feel like we've done anything wrong," said Mrs. Rosemarie Stillion, 24. "We thought it was a legitimate adoption procedure."

WAS 'DESPERATE' "I was desperate," Stillion, also 24, told reporters.

The boys, Thomas and George, said they opposed the plan.

"We never wanted to leave our Mommy," Thomas said, "but Mommy and Daddy said we had to, that we would have a better life."

Mrs. Stillion said the twins were by a previous marriage. Stillion said their two daughters, Nancy, 4, and Tina, 3, were not offered.

TOOK MARKED MONEY Detective R. E. Brumley and Policewoman Lanny Dixon said they made the arrests after they made a $300 down payment with marked money and a bill of sale had been signed.

The Stillions said they met in 1954 while Stillion was with the Air Force near Southampton, England. She said she obtained a divorce, married Stillion, and brought the twins to the United States in 1955.

Stillion said he first settled in his home town of Brighton, Mich., and came to Texas only two months ago to take a pipeline job in south Texas.

"I didn't know anything about pipelining, but I was broke and desperate for a job," he said.

Stillion said the job was no longer open when he reached Texas and he brought his wife and the four children to Houston.

Stillion said he intended to use the money to repair his automobile and finance a return trip to Brighton.

Americans Seeking Business in Uruguay

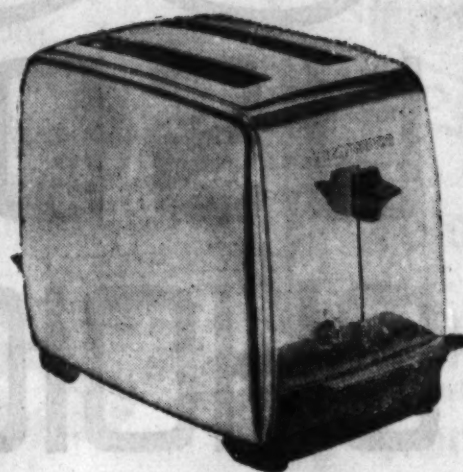

BUENOS AIRES (UPI)—A group of young American industrialists left Wednesday for Montevideo, Uruguay, after meeting with President Arturo Frondizi and surveying the possibilities of investing in Argentina. Thrasher Terms Jekyll's First Winter Opening an Unusual Success

Jekyll Island, open during the winter months for the first time since the state bought it 12 years ago, is experiencing "unusual success" as a winter vacationland.

State Auditor B. E. Thrasher Jr., member of the Jekyll Island Authority, made that comment Wednesday in reporting that the island's two motels have had an average occupancy of 35 per cent so far this winter.

Thrasher said the occupancy rate has been much better than anticipated. He pointed out that the authority so far has done very little promoting of Jekyll as a winter resort.

The island's motels opened last year and did a rush business during the summer.

The authority is promoting Jekyll as a year-round resort because of its mild climate.

The island's 98-unit motel has another 100 units under construction and the 32-unit motel is constructing 32 additional units. Both motels expect to complete the additions by next summer.

Thrasher also announced that the authority has signed a lease with St. Andrews Beach Corp., which will construct a 46-unit motel for Negroes on the southern end of the island. That section of the island, including bath house facilities and spacious fishing and picnic grounds, is reserved for Negroes.

The Negro motel will include a modern restaurant and dining room. The project is expected to cost in excess of $385,000.

The island's motels have been built by private interests which lease the grounds.

Thrasher also reported that the authority hopes to have its shopping center, now under construction, completed by summer. The $425,000 building was planned to house a cafeteria, grocery store, drug store, island manager's office, and island police and fire departments.

Thrasher said the authority is considering dividing some of the space now planned for one business in the shopping building so that it might house more than just a cafeteria, grocery store and drug store.

"We've already had applications for all three of those type businesses and for other types, including a sporting goods store," Thrasher said.

8 Survivors Tell Of Horror, Heroism

Airliner Torn Into Splinters, Victims Flung in Icy River

NEW YORK (AP)—Courage, heroism, horror—and God as a companion there in the icy waters of the fog-shrouded river.

Such were the vivid recollections Wednesday of some of those who still lived after the ill-fated flight of an American Airlines turbo-jet plane.

They are only a scant eight in number—only a handful of the 73 persons aboard the big ship as it plunged Tuesday night into the East River.

Robert Sullivan, a lad of 8, told of the courage of his mother, Mrs. Lorraine Sullivan, after the two were thrown into the water.

MOMMY HELD ME

"Mommy was holding me," Robert said from a hospital bed. "Then in the water we couldn't stay up. I tried to hold my breath. I was cold. My arms felt frozen."

Robert and his mother were pulled out of the cold water later and taken to a hospital. But during the night Mrs. Sullivan died.

The five Sullivans were flying back to New York after a happy trip to visit relatives in Chicago. Missing and presumed dead are the father, Joseph, and Robert's two sisters, Patricia, 13, Joan 5.

ONLY CHILD SAVED

Robert was the only child among the five passengers and three crew members who survived.

Another passenger, Seymour Kernach, 36, a salesman, may have been partly responsible for saving the life of the Sullivan boy.

He related how he had pulled the two stewardesses from the shattered plane and then, he said, "I pulled out a little boy."

Kernach, still shivering although covered with a foot-high pile of blankets at Flushing Hospital, spoke of the frigid water.

SOMEHOW MADE IT

"God, that water was cold. You don't know. I was so close to giving up. I swear to God, I gave up twice. But then somehow I swam to the tugboat."

"God was with me," Kernach added.

One of the two stewardesses pulled from the plane by Kernach was Joan Zeller, 21, now at Queens General Hospital. The other stewardess is missing.

Miss Zeller, critically injured, was wheeled into an emergency room.

"I wish they'd turn me on my side," she said. Then she pleaded: "Don't leave me—stay with me. That crash—that horrible crash."

CRASH DESCRIBED

Edward Gottlieb, 49, a New York public relations executive, was in critical condition at Queens General Hospital but he vividly described the crash.

"It was horrible," he said. "The plane seemed to splinter into a thousand pieces. Then I found myself out on the wing."

"It was a horror to behold—the screams for help, the cries of terror, bits of people, the plane and belongings. I felt myself deep in the water and I wondered if I would be able to come up again. Then I saw the copilot, all bloodied up, and on the wing. He shouted for me to come over. I paddled there but I couldn't climb up."

The copilot, Frank Hlavacek, 33, of Wilmette, Ill., also was among the survivors. His condition was critical.

Gottlieb told how Hlavacek had helped him up and, despite in-

Funeral for Diana Dors' Husband Turned Into Bedlam by Her Fans

LONDON (UPI)—The funeral of Dennis Hamilton, estranged husband of actress Diana Dors, was turned into bedlam Wednesday by fans who crawled over church pews and demanded autographs from the mourning film star.

Four photographers who entered St. James Roman Catholic Church while a Requiem Mass was being said had to be ordered out. They took flash pictures of Miss Dors as she knelt praying and sobbing.

When the Mass was over, Miss Dors tried to leave the church, but scores of women, many of them clutching children, jostled around and poked autograph books and pencils at her. One woman grabbed Miss Dors by the arm.

Hamilton, 34, died last Saturday of a heart ailment. Miss Dors, separated from him for more than a year, was in the United States at the time.

Redskins Threaten to Go to Reds

MINNEAPOLIS (UPI)—An Indian leader threatened Wednesday night to sell a third of the state of North Dakota to Soviet Russia.

Al La Fontaine, a Sioux Indian who speaks for a group of Chippewas as head of the Indian Trades Council here, said he will ask the Russians for bids if the U.S. government refuses to help his people.

PROMISES CHANCE

Nine million acres of North Dakota is at the Indians' — and the Russians' — disposal, La Fontaine said. The land was never legally turned over to the U.S. government, he said.

La Fontaine promised to give America a fair chance to keep North Dakota.

He plans to lead a delegation of Indians to Washington Saturday to demand government aid in "putting industries on the reservations." He hoped to take the speaker's rostrum in both the House and Senate to plead his case.

TELEPHONED EMBASSY

If he doesn't get satisfaction, La Fontaine said, he and the other Indians from Minnesota, the Dakotas and Montana will drop around at the Soviet Embassy.

La Fontaine started the ball rolling Tuesday by telephoning the Russian embassy and asking for a $5 million dollar loan to help the Indians. He said the Russians sounded receptive, but he had since changed his plans.

U.S. Tools Available, City Told

The chief of the Red Oak volunteer fire department complained before the Fulton County commissioners Wednesday that thousands of dollars worth of surplus U.S. equipment is available but that metropolitan Atlanta can't get any of it.

Ralph Waldo Emerson, the chief, said his department would like to obtain the surplus equipment for fire fighting and use in other emergencies.

POINTS TO PERMIT

He said that the Metropolitan Atlanta Civil Defense Organization does not have a permit necessary to obtain supplies.

Elliott Jackson, metropolitan CD director, reached in New York for comment, said he has not asked for a permit because he had not felt the need for one. He said he is trying to get a survival plan into operation and indicated he would subsequently ask for a permit.

Mayor Hartsfield commented that Atlanta buys "first-line equipment" and does not need surplus.

Emerson said such independent Civil Defense organizations as East Point, Hapeville, Stockbridge and Mountain View have obtained surplus equipment at very little cost.

OBTAINED FIRE TRUCKS

Emerson said the Mountain View CD organization obtained a fire truck that had been driven only 38 miles for something like $60.

Emerson and assistant chief A. D. Thompson appeared before the county commissioners seeking help in obtaining a tanker truck to be used in fighting fires in south Fulton County.

"If we had had it last month, we could have saved six houses (from burning down) outside the fire district," Emerson said. "Under insurance regulations, we can't take our two fire trucks outside the district."

UPI's Eskew Heads Georgia Sigma Delta Chi

Rhea T. Eskew, Southern Division manager for United Press International, was named 1959 Georgia chairman Wednesday for Sigma Delta Chi, professional journalism fraternity.

Eskew succeeds William I. Ray, managing editor of the Atlanta Journal. The appointment was announced by national chairman James Byron of Ft. Worth, Tex.

Eskew is a member of the executive council of the Atlanta Professional Chapter of Sigma Delta Chi. He served as secretary of the Atlanta chapter in 1956.

Regents See Vandiver On Age Bill

But Chairman Expects No Veto

Four members of the board of regents met with Gov. Vandiver Wednesday, but did not ask him to veto the controversial college "age-limit" bill.

Chairman Robert Arnold told newsmen the measure was discussed at the meeting and added that he was sure the governor was going to sign the bill. Arnold said he did not ask the governor to refuse to sign the bill because, "I'm on the governor's team."

Three other regents who attended the meeting, Morris Bryan Jr., of Jefferson, Quimby Melton Jr., of Griffin, and Howard (Bo) Calloway of Pine Mountain declined to comment on Arnold's statement. Arnold said, however, that none of the regents asked the governor not to sign the bill.

The bill is an administration measure that would prevent university system undergraduates from entering college after reaching the age of 21. Graduates would have to enter before reaching the age of 25.

The bill passed the House by a vote of 160 to 26 and the Senate by 51 to 2.

Following the meeting of the governor and the regents, United Press International quoted "an observer close to Gov. Vandiver" as saying the governor now realized he was "oversold" on the bill and is "not too keen" on signing it.

UPI said one source told them Vandiver "didn't know the ramifications" of the bill when he endorsed it. However, he still intends to sign the bill, the wire service source said.

"Maybe some of his (Vandiver's) friends who were lawyers oversold him," the source said. "They were good friends and he had a lot of confidence in them."

Navy Sends Wrong Body To Parents

GAFFNEY, S.C. (AP)—A mixup of bodies of three seamen killed in an auto accident at Pensacola, Fla., was laid before Navy authorities Wednesday by the distraught parents of one of the men.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Brunson Phillips of Gaffney said the body which arrived here from Pensacola, was not that of their son, Jerry Robert Driskill, 23, reported killed in the wreck along with two Navy enlisted men from Wisconsin.

Young Driskill was riding with Seamen Donald L. Tullis, 19, of Racine, Wis., and Lawrence H. Geis, 22, of Milwaukee, when their auto collided with a truck. Their identities were established by the Pensacola Naval Air Station, where the three were stationed.

The body purported to be that of young Driskill arrived at a funeral home here Wednesday and funeral services were set for Thursday.

However, when Phillips—who is Driskill's stepfather — viewed the body at the funeral home he said the body was not that of his son. There was a difference of some 40 pounds in weight, in addition to physical features.

Senate Body Raises Ike's Airport Aid

WASHINGTON (AP)—In the face of new objections by President Eisenhower, the Senate Commerce Committee Wednesday okayed a Democratic backed airport aid bill far bigger than the administration wants.

The committee voted to send to the Senate for action a bill to provide $65 million in federal airport grants during the next five years.

Eisenhower has asked a much more limited program—$200 million for airport construction under a four-year program.

Before the Senate committee finished work on the bill, it rejected an amendment by Sen. Cotton (R-N.H.) to rule out terminals as eligible for aid money.

HEALTH and HAPPINESS

By DR. SARA JORDAN

Guard Against Hay Fever

At certain seasons of the year certain people begin to sneeze, blow their noses, get teary and sometime profane. Then the rest of the family knows the ragweed season is on and they look on with sympathy and some frustration.

Ragweed is the most common offender. A ragweed plant produces a billion pollen grains to be blown through the air and into the noses and mouths of humans. In individuals who are allergic, these foreign bodies are not disposed of in the usual way. Instead of this normal calm process, the defense is so active that severe symptoms occur, and this is an allergic reaction.

The ragweed plant is to be blamed for about 95 per cent of all hay fever. In the Northeast, ragweed pollens are rampant from August to the first frost. Tree pollens and grasses may cause trouble from mid-March to June. In other parts of the country the trouble seasons vary.

This very unpleasant disease affects about 10 per cent of the population. If bronchial asthma is a complication, as it sometimes is, there is a certain mortality. It is to prevent this serious development of asthma, as well as to relieve the sneezing and the nose-blower, that measures should be and are being taken to prevent the disease. Then, too, when the nasal passages and throat are irritated, they become more susceptible to infection.

The symptoms are attacks of sneezing—sometimes exhausting attacks—stiffness of the nose and burning and itching of mouth and nose, all of which may be only slightly incapacitating. But these same symptoms may be so severe as to interfere with sleep and appetite, thus affecting the well-being and energy of the individual.

In the affected 10 per cent of the population there is an appreciable loss of time and efficiency.

The logical way to go about prevention is, of course, to destroy the ragweed. Spraying with a chemical called 2,4-D seems to be the answer to the destruction of the ragweed.

When it is done by experienced applicators, it does no harm to other vegetation or insects. This gets at most of the basic cause of this scourge.

If you have already developed the symptoms, much can be done to give you comfort. To prevent trouble, injections of pollen extract can be given to desensitize you or build up your resistance, either before the season begins or during an attack.

There's hope then for you unhappy hay fever victims! Either at the source of your trouble by the destruction of those minute pollen cells or before the attack by giving you the fighting front to deal with them, you will at long last get relief!

(Dr. Jordan cannot undertake to answer personal questions by mail. However, questions of general interest relating to health will be cussed from time to time in this column.)

To Visit Indonesia

LONDON (UPI)—Radio Peiping reported Wednesday that President Ho Chi Minh of Communist North Viet Nam would visit Indonesia soon at the invitation of President Sukarno. The Chinese Communist broadcast said the announcement was made in Hanoi.

RHYME A DAY

By OLLIE REEVES

"Children of today are raised, not in fear, but in a climate of understanding."—Child article quote.

If you deny your child some right . . . Or some small favor he demands . . . The chances are you'll have a fight . . . Or argument upon your hands . . . Which you and I would not have done . . . When we were young, for we were told . . . To be polite to everyone . . . And most respectful of the old.

We certainly would not indict . . . All children with a sweeping charge . . . For some of them are most polite . . . But if you take them, by and large . . . (Whatever "by and large" may mean) . . . The youngsters of the present day . . . Are pretty quick to start a scene . . . Unless you let them have their way.

What's to be done? You will not find . . . The answer here, for if we knew . . . It's doubtful it would be the kind . . . Of answer that appealed to you . . . And neither will you find it in . . . The countless books upon the shelves . . . And, after all, it may begin . . . Not with the children, but ourselves.

(P.S.) Modern children have no fear
Because there are no woodsheds near.

Could Be That Malthus Was Right After All

Figures released by Harvard recently show that up to the age of 35 accidents are the biggest single cause of death. At 35 heart disease moves in as number one, then at age 45, cancer comes second. At 65 and up heart disease is number one, vascular lesions number two, and cancer number three.

All of this picture will be changed within the next few years. Just as sure as the calendar rolls around, medical science is going to come up with cures for the heart disease and the cancer. Look at the research and results already announced concerning cholesterol—that blood-fat substance tied in so closely with circulatory diseases.

The point is: Malthus was right, but he made his prediction 175 years too soon, and he based his idea on the wrong assumption. Malthus said that the world's population was increasing in geometric progression and the ability to produce food was increasing only in arithmetic progression. Sooner or later, he said, there were going to be some mighty hungry people all over the world. Food production, through the use of machines, has kept pace.

But look at that population! Everybody's having babies and pretty soon the big disease killers will be licked—just like pneumonia. I guess in a few years the government will be paying incentives for increasing farm production—not shelling out money to keep it down.

And where in the world are we going to put all the people?

Floral Vocabulary

The say-it-with-flowers fellows estimate that Valentine greetings will be expressed with flowers by at least 1,000,000 people come the day. So you'll know what to say when you say it with flowers, here's a short floral vocabulary:

Red roses—love; red tulips—passion; heliotrope—undying love; Jonquils—a plea that affection be returned; hyacinths—the heart demands more than flattery; marigolds—plea for sympathy in love; white roses—mystery and silence; any pink flower—no!

Speaking of flowers, we're lucky to be living in Atlanta. Mrs. Kenneth B. Lohed, wife of the president of Kiwanis International, from Toronto, Canada, marveled at the beauty of a camellia corsage she was given at a luncheon here in honor of her and her husband.

"I've tried to raise camellias in Toronto. I had to set them out in big tubs and take them in when the weather got cold. I did get some little blooms, but nothing like these," the good neighbor from the north said.

Mrs. E. C. Hammond, Mrs. Lohed's hostess, pointed out that in Atlanta we have something blooming all year round. Aren't we lucky!

Your Stars Today

Even the best must own that patience and resignation are the pillars of human peace on earth.—Johnson

Daily Guide—While the over-all atmosphere is one of tension with danger of explosive action, the underlying accent for this year is to maintain peace through patience and discipline, especially with the moon in Capricorn.

Those in official positions are in critical situations; if they do not conform they could lose their leadership as has already happened to some.

There is a strong urge to expand, to break precedent, to shoot the works right now, but only rigid adherence to sensible growth will bring permanent advancement, so hold to the line.

Happy Birthday Aquarius! Decisions may have to be made now which involve your career or business, your associates and partnership ties.

If necessary to cut off ties, break away or accept entirely new alliances, don't hesitate to follow the way circumstances push you.

Expand in career and business but count the costs financially. The middle of summer and fall months can bring further complications in personal relationships.

Theater Brawler Shot Knifing Policeman Here

A 32-year-old junk dealer late Wednesday was shot and seriously wounded when he attacked a policeman with a knife, records showed.

Robert Lee Slaton, of 553 Washington St. S.W., was admitted to Grady Hospital with a bullet wound in the right chest.

Patrolman J. N. Gibby said he was walking a patrol on Georgia avenue, S.W., when a girl came out of the Empire Theater and told him a man was creating a disturbance inside.

Gibby said he found Slaton and another man yelling at each other inside the theater. He said he told Slaton he would have to be quiet or leave the theater.

"He picked me up and threw me down in the theater aisle," Gibby said. "Then he ran down through the theater and out a door. I got up and followed as soon as I could."

Gibby said he caught up with Slaton and Slaton turned with a knife, shouting: "I'll kill you, you — — —"

"I threw up my hands to cover my face and he hit me with the knife and cut my hand," Gibby said. "I fell backwards and he kept coming. I grabbed my revolver and fired twice."

Gibby said the wounded man "ran over me before I could get up off the ground" and disappeared in the direction of the theater.

Patrolmen F. W. Johnson and M. G. Redding apprehended Slaton

The Rhythm Five

Auburn had shot down Georgia Tech, 51-40, Tuesday night in Alexander Coliseum and Rex Frederick, the trigger man, was answering questions about the longest victory chain in college basketball.

The 6-5 Frederick, an All-America candidate despite a wounded knee, had contributed only four points, but one and all agreed that he was the difference between the teams. In the first half, when the issue was in doubt, Frederick took command of the boards. Tech had two 6-7 men and Dave Denton, the jumping jack on the front line, but Frederick controlled the rebounds and enabled Auburn to control the game.

The Plainsmen had cleared a tall hurdle to bag No. 26, and Frederick was saying that this had been the game everyone was worrying about.

"Tech played us a real fine game at Auburn," he said, "and we figured they'd be even tougher at home. And they certainly had us worried with that zone defense."

A bystander remarked that there was no cause for concern in the second half. "Well, I just want to tell you that we didn't quit worrying until the final whistle," Frederick replied. "Tech has a good team, but they just weren't hitting."

There's always considerable pressure involved in a long run of success in any sport. What effect does the streak have on Auburn players?

"It doesn't bother me any," Frederick said. "In fact, I enjoy it."

Eaves Put Plainsmen in Penthouse

Modest Joel Eaves, the former Murphy High coach, who introduced Auburn to the rarefied atmosphere of the SEC basketball penthouse, isn't as relaxed as Frederick.

"It's the kind of pressure you like to have," Eaves said, smiling, "but there's a certain amount of tension involved. There's nothing taboo about the streak, however, the players talk about it. They take a lot of pride in it."

Henry Hart, the Milton Berle of the Plain, who's funny to everyone but opponents, volunteered his thinking on the streak. "We're just having fun," he said, "I haven't noticed any pressure. Think how it would be if we had a 26-game losing streak going."

Hart, who bombed Tech for 18 points, is strictly business on the court, but he's a happy-go-lucky youngster after the final whistle.

After a recent game an onlooker accused Hart of "showboating." "Maybe so," Hart agreed, "but don't let Coach Eaves hear you say that. That's what he already thinks."

In the dressing room, a visitor inquired about Auburn's next opponent.

"Georgia," Hart said, "but we're going back to the Sports Arena, where all the games are sellouts."

"That's the only court in the conference where Georgia will feel right at home," someone said. "The Sports Arena is almost as cozy as Woodruff Hall."

"It's not that bad," Hart said. "We turn off the lights when we practice for a game in Woodruff Hall."

"We don't turn off all the lights," Frederick said, "but we do turn off some of the lights. This is a fine court at Tech, but the lighting is bad here, too."

McCarthy Would Cheer Both Teams

It seems appropriate that the lights should be low at Auburn practice sessions now that the drills are tuned to music. In fact, you can say that Auburn waltzes to the SEC crown if the Plainsmen outdribble Kentucky and Miss. State down the stretch.

Coach Eaves turns on the turntable when the players engage in shooting exercises. He explains that the music soothes the nerves, and the Rhythm Five has developed into Auburn's most successful team in history.

With seven games remaining on the agenda, Auburn has an opportunity to become the second SEC school to post a perfect record. Kentucky has twice achieved the remarkable feat. Before Auburn invades Kentucky on Feb. 21, however, I'd like to recommend a full week of rock 'n' roll.

Tech players, who have lost to both teams twice, were asked to compare Plainsmen and Wildcats. But only Dave Denton supplied a comparison.

"I'll just say that Kentucky deserves its rating," Denton said.

"They play a different brand of basketball," Terry Randall said. "What do I mean? They're just different, that's all." Buddy Blemker seconded the motion with a grunt.

Tech and Auburn played a different style of basketball Tuesday night. Tech's zone stymied Auburn's famed shuffle attack, and the Engineers purposely put a throttle on their offense. It was a contest which Miss. State's Babe McCarthy, a ball control advocate, would have enjoyed to the hilt.

A disgruntled football fan described the game in one sentence: "Both teams kicked on first down all night."

If both teams had resorted to racehorse tactics the outcome probably would have been the same. Only the score would have been different, perhaps 91-80, instead of 51-40.

Flanagan Gets Dupas In TV Split Decision

ST. PAUL, Minn. (AP)—Del Flanagan of St. Paul exploited a six-pound weight advantage to gain a split decision over buzzsaw Ralph Dupas in a 10-round welterweight bout Wednesday night. Flanagan weighed 148, Dupas 142.

The victory boosted the veteran St. Paul Irishman's hopes of landing a title shot he has long demanded. Dupas was rated No. 3 welterweight contender by the National Boxing Assn. and Flanagan was fourth.

Referee Johnny Stanton scored the nationally televised fight 97-95 for Flanagan and judge Dick DeLaney had it 98-95 for the St. Paulite. Judge Jimmy Ferranti had Dupas ahead 97-96.

The Associated Press scored it 97-96 for Flanagan.

Flanagan discarded finesse to fight the tricky Dupas from a flat-footed stance through most of the action and landed the heavier wallop. Dupas, fighting in flurries, was busier but didn't land as effectively.

There were no knockdowns although both fighters were damaged in the early rounds. Flanagan drew blood when he landed a hard left hook to Dupas' nose in the second round. A round later the Irishman opened a cut along side Dupas' left eye.

Ag Hill battlefield communique:

Fullback Dave Lloyd crashed into the enemy lines for the first time Wednesday afternoon and battered several safetymen. The Georgia Bulldog power driver was termed successful in his debut.

Up front, pincer movements by center Phil Ashe and guard Pat Dye aided in clearing the way for Lloyd and his fellow troops. Their blocking was outstanding.

The defensive line was attacked savagely in other areas by halfbacks Don Soberdash and Bobby Walden.

Wednesday's skirmish, the first of winter practice in Athens, is to be followed by full-scale operations on Friday and Saturday with controlled scrimmages.

Assistant coach Johnny Rauch reported on Wednesday's activity:

"The weather was still bad, of course, and we scrimmaged a little in the dry spots on the field. First three units were on offense against the next three. Slippery conditions caused quite a few fumbles, but on a whole, I thought we had a fairly good practice."

"Ashe and Dye did a fine job of blocking, and Soberdash and Walden ran well."

"Lloyd ran like a bull through the line and got off a couple of lengthy gains. A few safetymen may have knots on their heads tomorrow."

PHIL ASHE

He Clears The Path

"Once he broke up on a trap and then made like Theron Sapp going off tackle."

"Lloyd is by no means a polished fullback yet. It's going to take a lot of hard work on his part, a lot of mental concentration. We know he's got the physical ability. But he's determined and working hard. We're keeping our fingers crossed."

Another fullback switch was made Wednesday on Ag Hill when head coach Wallace Butts moved right half Dale Bush, 180-pound sophomore from Colquitt, to the position.

Bush is a two-year veteran of the Redshirt squad who never quite made it at halfback.

"Of course, Bush was moved from fifth string right half to fifth string full, but it may be that he'll find himself there," said Rauch.

"He's a good, hard-nosed kid who gives it 100 per cent. He may be better suited at fullback. Dale has good speed but he always seemed to run a little tight from halfback."

Butts promises more shuffling as the Bulldogs move into the racking part of winter practice.

MAYBE, YES

Tide, Tulane To Go in Twin Bill?

MOBILE, Ala. (AP)—Mobile may have a collegiate football doubleheader this fall.

Alabama and Tulane already are matched in a Southeastern Conference game here the night of Nov. 7.

And Reed Green, Mississippi Southern athletic director, said Wednesday Southern officials are considering a plan to shift the Hattiesburg, Miss., school's game with North Carolina State on that date to Mobile. It would be played in the afternoon.

Green said he hopes to announce something definite on the proposal by Sunday.

Green also announced that Southern's game with Texas A&M the night of Oct. 3 will be played in Mobile. The game previously was listed for the Hattiesburg campus about 100 miles northwest of Mobile.

Southern Cal 'Cleans Up'

Two Recruiters Tendered Other Jobs at University

LOS ANGELES (AP)—The University of Southern California Tuesday announced a sweeping reorganization of its athletic program and relieved two recruiters of their duties.

Nick Pappas, field secretary of the alumni association, and assistant football coach Al Davis no longer will recruit athletes. But both will be tendered other positions in the university. Davis may continue as an assistant coach.

The move follows drastic penalties imposed on Southern California in January by the National Collegiate Athletic Assn. at its convention in Cincinnati.

Dr. Norman H. Topping, president, emphasized that he does not believe USC deserved the punishment. Said he:

"This week the faculty committee on athletics completed its investigation. Although the committee has some doubts as to our guilt, it is clear that we have either been guilty of minor and technical infractions or that we have permitted practices which might be interpreted as violations of the NCAA code."

The NCAA placed the school on two years' probation for offering improper inducements to two student athletes. This made USC ineligible to enter NCAA championships or invitational events and to participate in NCAA-controlled television programs.

In the new order, the entire responsibility for contacting prospective student athletes will rest in the department of intercollegiate athletics, headed by Athletic Director Jess Hill.

Contributions from alumni and friends of the university for support of athletics will go directly to the university, which will be responsible for the administration of the funds. In the past, various clubs and groups supervised their own athletic aid programs.

Dr. Topping said the General Alumni Corp. has been asked to refrain from contacting prospective athletes, and to merge with the university to strengthen the total program.

As previously announced, Francis Tappan has been named vice president in charge of the division of student and alumni affairs. This post will supervise student activities, admissions, alumni relations and the department of athletics.

Dr. Topping reiterated that a formal appeal will be made to the NCAA at the meeting of its council in April to reduce some of the penalties.

Primarily, he would like for the school to be able to complete this spring in such sports as tennis, baseball, track and golf. But he wants the probation on football for 1959 revised so the Trojan team could play in the Rose Bowl Jan. 1, 1960.

The probation on football expires Jan. 7, 1960.

Tar Heel Sophomore Hits 32 in Tough ACC Victory

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP)—Sophomore York Larese's 32 points, half of his team's totals, pushed second-ranked North Carolina to a 64-57 Atlantic Coast Conference basketball victory over defending champion Maryland Wednesday night.

It was North Carolina's 13th win in 14 starts and gave the Tar Heels an 8-0 ACC record. Maryland is 4-4 in the conference.

Larese, a sharp-shooting sophomore from New York City, turned in his best performance, scoring 13 points the first half and 19 in the second half.

Al Bunge, who led Maryland's scoring with 13, sparked a late spurt by the Terps that pulled within five points with three minutes remaining.

Big O Hits 38 In Cincy Romp

CINCINNATI (AP)—Cincinnati's Bearcats, cutting loose with brilliant ball handling and paced by Oscar Robertson's 38 points, crushed Dayton, 96-74, Wednesday.

The Bearcats, rated fifth in the nation, held the Flyers to only six field goals in the first half. They built up a 47-23 margin in that period.

Then they romped to a 78-45 lead midway in the last half before coach George Smith started flooding the place with reserves. It was Cincinnati's ninth straight triumph and the 15th in 17 games.

Robertson, the "Big O," had 13 field goals and 12 free throws and he sat out the last three minutes of the first half and about the same amount of time in the last half.

It was Bing's 4th.

PALM BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Mrs. Alice O'Neal Dye, six-time champion of Indiana's women golfers, upset medalist Betty Kerby of Akron, Ohio, on the 20th hole in Wednesday's first round of the women's championship of Palm Beach.

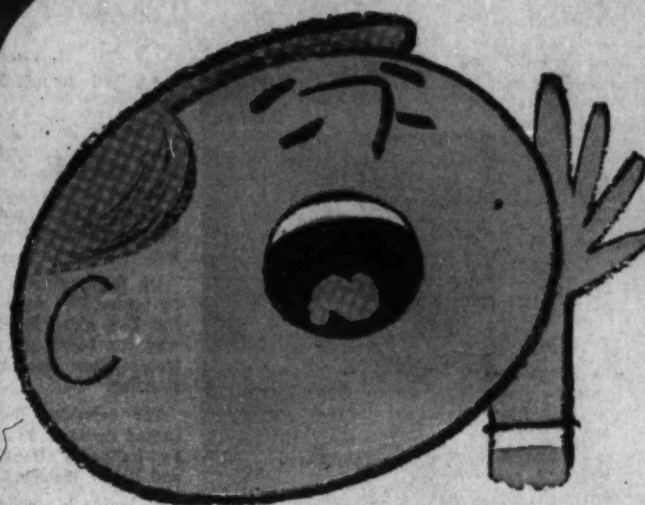

It was a fine battle between the two women. Neither was ever more than one hole up. Mrs. Dye dropped a 20-foot putt for a birdie deuce on the 20th to finally close out her opponent, the current Ohio State champ.

The other first round matches went according to form on this windy day when scores went a bit higher than in the qualifying round.

Two 18-hole rounds are scheduled Thursday. The feature will be a match between Joanne Goodwin of Haverhill, Mass., and Mrs. Ann Casey Johnstone of Mason City, Iowa.

Mrs. Johnson, who won the Palm Beach tourney in 1956, won her opening match against Mrs. Fran Emerson of Dayton, Ohio, 6 and 5. Miss Goodwin defeated Ellen Gery of Coral Gables, Fla., 6 and 5.

Mrs. Dye will meet Judy Bell of Wichita, Kan., in the second round. Miss Bell won over Mrs. Frank Reif Jr., of Palm Beach, 3 and 2.

Big Men's Off Night Cost Tech

Trio Hit Only 2 Of 25 Shots Taken

It's a matter of percentages, Georgia Tech coach Whack Hyder was thinking Wednesday.

"Twenty-three per cent on your floor shooting won't hardly win any ball games, and that's what we shot against Auburn on Tuesday," he said in retrospect.

"To tell you the truth, I can't remember when we shot so low in a game.

"Our front men took 25 shots and hit only two of them. That's what hurt us. One of them, Roger Kaiser, told me today it was the first time since the eighth grade he had failed to score a field goal in a game. It was just one of those nights, too," he said.

"I told Roger just to shake it off. We've got more games coming up and I know he and the others will return to their normal form. No use worrying about it."

Kaiser suffered a bruise on his right hand in the 31-40 loss to Auburn. He spent two hours soaking it in warm water Wednesday and should be ready for the game with Tulane Saturday night.

Hyder, who scouted the Greenies when they played Georgia, sees another tough game for Saturday.

"When we saw them, Tulane was on a 10-game trip and was real tired," said Hyder. "We know they'll be in top shape for us."

He said defenses for Tulane will be concentrated on stopping center Vic Klinker and guards Gary Stoll and Dick O'Brien.

"I notice Klinker has averaged about 20 points a game in their last three or four times out. He's a big man who'll hurt you."

Hyder finds no great dishonor in the five losses Tech has suffered in the SEC.

"We've lost to Kentucky, Auburn, Mississippi State and Tennessee. In one order or another they were picked to be the four top teams in the league. Now it's been narrowed down to the first three."

Hyder added "right now it looks like Kentucky as the SEC winner, though it could end in a co-championship if Mississippi State can beat them at Starkville."

He said there would be no change in the Tech starting order for Tulane, with Kaiser and Denton at forwards, Richards at center and Bud Blenker and Terry Randall at guards.—THOMY.

Richie Guerin sparked the Knicks with 39 points.

She carded a brilliant 181-229-212-622 series in her local record.

"I've just been bowling about 18 months," she began "I was watching those women bowl on television, and I just wanted to see what I could do."

Apparently, she has learned quickly with tenpins, though she wasn't exactly a stranger to bowling because she had rolled duckpins.

(Copyright 1959, The New York Times Co.)
ROME—The 21st ecumenical council of the Roman Catholic Church will be held in Rome in 1961. It will be known as the Vatican or the Lateran Council, depending on which of two Roman basilicas will be the scene of the plenary meetings.

Disclosing Wednesday the foreseeable date and place of the proposed gathering of bishops and other churchmen from all over the world, Pope John XXIII urged the pilgrims attending his weekly general audience to "pray every day" for the success of the ecumenical council.

From his first announcement 10 days ago, the Pontiff has made clear that the main purpose of the great religious event was reunion with the "separated communities" of Christianity.

The forthcoming ecumenical council, or general conference of the church, required "at least two years of intense preparation," the Pontiff explained Wednesday. He was thought to mean the doctrinal and organizational preliminaries within the Roman Catholic groups outside it.

The Pontiff appeared confident that the world situation in the next years would permit the bishops and other ecclesiastics of all continents to flock to Rome after completion of the preparatory work. Pope John, who at 77 daily surprises his aides with his vitality, obviously expects to preside over the ecumenical council in person.

"The church is alive, more alive than ever," the Pontiff said. He added smilingly: "For this reason we have planned, with the consent of the most eminent cardinals who collaborate with us in the government of the church, to prove that we, too, are alive, more alive than ever."

250 Executives To Attend Tech Pension Forum

More than 250 Atlanta businessmen are expected to attend a seminar Feb. 12 at Georgia Tech on the coverage of the Federal Welfare and Pension Plans Disclosure Act as passed by Congress last year.

The seminar, which will last from 9 a.m. to noon, is being sponsored by the Congressional Action Committee of the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce. Reservations can be made through the C. of C. office.

Speakers at the seminar will include Nelson Borts of Washington, D.C., associate director of the U.S. Bureau of Labor Standards, and Edward H. Kruse Jr., of the Atlanta actuarial firm of Bowles, Andrews and Towne.

Nursery Head Acquitted of Beating Boy

AUGUST (A)—A Superior Court jury Wednesday acquitted Mrs. Willie Mae McCarthy of a charge of assault with intent to murder a 7-year-old boy at her Druid Park nursery in May.

Mrs. McCarthy had been accused of punishing the boy, Earl Dingess, by forcing him to drink liniment and water, washing out his mouth with turpentine and subjecting him to frequent whippings.

E. B. Florio, chairman of the Richmond County board of health, said the verdict would make it "mandatory" for the board to grant Mrs. McCarthy an operating permit for the nursery. A review board had denied her a permit several months ago pending outcome of the trial.

Ike's Labor Bill Invites Collusion, Kennedy Says

WASHINGTON (A)—Sen. Kennedy (D-Mass.) Wednesday denounced President Eisenhower's labor bill as "an open invitation to collusion between corrupt employers and labor racketeers."

The senator, presiding over a hearing on labor legislation, fired back in sharp words as Secretary of Labor James P. Mitchell indirectly attacked as inadequate Kennedy's own bill aimed at corruption in unions.

SAYS IT GOES TOO FAR
Kennedy said the administration's bill goes too far. He said it would encourage more labor racketeering, deny honest unions their best weapons against existing racketeering and impose "dangerous restrictions on workers' traditional legitimate rights of free speech and peaceful bargaining."

The senator told Mitchell "you have opened wide a Pandora's box" by bringing in controversial amendments that could mean "eventually you will get no reform bill at all."

Kennedy tore into the administration measure after the labor secretary read a lengthy statement which never specifically mentioned Kennedy's bill. But what Mitchell said obviously was aimed at it.

ASKS BOYCOTT TARGET
Mitchell said any bill would be only a partial answer at best if it does not deal with secondary boycotts, "blackmail picketing" and the no-man's land in labor-management relations in which neither the federal nor state governments nor assume jurisdiction.

Secondary boycotts involve strikes against a third party not directly involved in a labor dispute.

"Blackmail picketing" refers to picketing to force recognition of a union where employees have already indicated they do not want a union to represent them; Mitchell said it is a device used by such racketeers as Johnny Dio to shake down employers and impose unions on workers against their will.

CALLED INADEQUATE
Kennedy's bill either does not cover the points listed by Mitchell or does so in a way the labor secretary called inadequate.

Saying a difference in philosophy was involved, Kennedy said his bill seeks to make the penalties clear and sharp on the dishonest union official while the administration bill would penalize the honest and dishonest union member alike.

The administration bill denies use of the National Labor Relations Board to unions which do not meet its provisions and also lifts the tax exemption privilege from them. Kennedy has attacked these sanctions as unfair to the great majority of unions.

No. 133: Know Your County

Toombs Has Led the State In Production of Onions

Toombs County, in southeast Georgia, was created from Emanuel, Montgomery and Tattnall counties in 1905, ranking 142nd in order of creation. It was named for Gen. Robert Toombs, who served in both the upper and lower Houses of the U.S. Congress. He was a brigadier general and secretary of state of the Confederate States. After the War Between the States, he refused to accept amnesty from the federal government and was buried, at his request, under a tombstone marked "Here lies an unpardoned Rebel." Lyons, the county seat, was founded as a depot on the old S.A.M. Railway.

Toombs County has 17,900 residents (1957 estimate), ranking 56th in population (1950 census). Lyons has 3,500 residents (1957 estimate). Lyons and Vidalia are important livestock markets. Towns in the county include Normantown, Cedar Crossing, Parkers, New Branch and Oshopee.

Toombs County covers 369 square miles, tying with Rabun County as 69th in size. There were 1,220 farms, averaging 132 acres, in the county in 1955. About 51 per cent of the farm acreage was in woodlands and 33 per cent in harvested croplands. Main crops were corn, cotton, tobacco and peanuts. A variety of truck crops is grown in the county and Toombs led the state in production of onions in 1954.

Tomorrow: Towns County.

Billy Graham

The Savior Was Perfect From First

QUESTION: Please explain the verse that says Christ was made perfect through suffering. Was He not perfect before that?

ANSWER: That verse, found in Hebrews 2:10, does not teach that Jesus was imperfect in the moral sense. He was the sinless Son of God and the only being ever to walk on the earth of whom it could be said that there was no sin in Him. The Bible, in this place, teaches that the sufferings of Christ were essential to His saving work on our behalf. Without suffering, He would never have been the Savior, for we are not saved by His life and teachings... we are saved by His death.

The word "perfect" has confused many people. In the Bible sense, it means maturity or completion. It does not mean quite what our present-day definition of the word means. That is why we can believe that Jesus was morally without any fault from the beginning, otherwise He would have needed salvation. But in this case, the Sinless One became sin for us, that we might be made the righteousness of God in Him.

Dutch Navy Aided

Learn to Get Along With People

In your business and social contacts you have to meet and be with people. Some you get along with, some you don't. And your ability, or inability, to get along with people can affect your health. In his new series Dr. Walter C. Alvarez tells you "How to Get Along With People." The series will continue daily in The Journal, except Saturday.

There are many in the United States today who are greatly concerned over what has been variously called conformity, Madison Avenue influence and a number of other things. Are we too organization prone without daring to be different? Dorothy Cremin, Journal staff writer, begins a new series about what's happening to the individual in our business and academic society.

Do We Dare To Be Different?

Spots Before Your Eyes in New Fashions

If you keep seeing dots before your eyes this spring there's a reason. Polka dots will reappear on the fashion scene. In the women's section Frances Cawthon, Journal fashion editor, says polka-dotted fabrics will be used in everything from scarves to cocktail dresses, and dots will be all sizes and even shapes.

New anti-coagulant drugs are saving the lives of many who have had heart attacks. In The Atlanta Journal and Constitution Magazine Katherine Barnwell, Magazine staff writer, talks with an Atlanta doctor who says that chances for recovery from a heart attack are much better today than 10 years ago, thanks, in part, to these new drugs.

FOR A HOME IMPROVEMENT LOAN

Remember the fellow who said: "Can't fix my roof in bad weather... and in good weather it doesn't need it?"

He overlooked something, in addition to family comfort. It's family profit-and-loss. For putting off repairs can run up losses fast!

So check that roof... that tired old porch, cracked plaster, broken paving. Examine your paint, indoors and out. A few smart dollars spent now can pay off handsomely as a home investment... your best investment.

And modern touches such as a new kitchen or extra bath can work wonders in more ways than one.

Ask your dealer or contractor to estimate the cost, and to arrange your loan through the C&S. Or see C&S direct. Either way, you'll add to value while multiplying family comfort. You'll build credit, too, where it can help you in dozens of ways—at the C&S.

Stewart Lakewood Center Pioneers Dynamic New Concept in Shopping

Expansion Of Center Is Planned

Even before Stewart Lakewood Center officially opens, plans already are in the making for additional shops and added services.

Rich's is contemplating constructing a new building in the center.

Two men's wear shops—Lee's Men's Shop and the National Shirt Shop—will open brand new stores in the center a few weeks after the grand opening.

G & M Cafeteria also is planning an ultra-modern cafeteria at Stewart Lakewood.

Pylant's Gift Shop and a Walter R. Thomas jewelry store also will be open for business in the near future.

And an Atlanta loan firm is negotiating to get an office in Stewart Lakewood Center.

MAMMOTH SIGN GOING UP TO MARK ENTRANCE TO FABULOUS STEWART LAKEWOOD CENTER
Big Steel and Plastic Marker Heralds Opening of First Mall-Type Shopping Center in Southeast

50 Shops Are Built On Mall

The curtain goes up in Southwest Atlanta Thursday on a dynamic new concept in shopping centers.

Mammoth and modern Stewart Lakewood Center, a functional tribute to thoughtful and imaginative design, opens with a flourish of special sales and buyers' opportunities.

The center, built like a city block without car traffic, contains more than 50 luxurious and spacious shops and stores. Yet Stewart Lakewood is as compact as a ladies' watch.

STEWART LAKEWOOD is built on a mall, with stores lining each side of a pedestrian street. Many stores have entrances from two or three sides. All stores are on one level, so there is no trudging up and down stairs.

Patios and patio benches dot both sides of the walkway. A garden will be planted in the center of the mall.

The center was laid out after an exhaustive survey of the good and bad points of other shopping centers, according to Stewart Lakewood designers.

As a result, Stewart Lakewood is "different" from other centers in two big ways.

The on-the-mall store arrangement has cut walking distances in half. And by having many competitive shops within the same "city block," Stewart Lakewood shoppers get the advantage of competitive prices.

CONVENIENCE AND competition are the verbal cornerstones

Sherman Troops Dug In

Where housewives now leisurely push hand-carts through air-conditioned stores, Union soldiers once cursed and sweated in the September sun as they dug in to prepare for a Confederate charge that never came.

The ground in which the soldiers dug is now occupied by Stewart Lakewood Center. But 95 years ago it was occupied by the left of Gen. Sherman's crack war-hardened 15th Corps.

The land now rates only a footnote in the long and terrible story of the Battle of Atlanta and Sherman's March to the Sea.

But from Sept. 7 until Nov. 15, 1864, the ground at the intersection of Stewart and Lakewood avenues must have seemed to the Yankees as important as life itself.

For this was the "high ground." It was here—where a modern merchandise center now stands—that the battle-weary 15th Corps had been ordered to move and prepare to stand off an attack.

From the hill on which Stewart Lakewood Center sits, Union sentinels undoubtedly looked intently to the southwest for the first sign of a Confederate skirmish line that would emerge from the little valleys and come sweeping across the green hills against the Union troops.

The 15th Corps marched to the Stewart Lakewood area directly from the bitter fighting around Jonesboro. The soldiers did not know that, for all practical purposes, the Battle of Atlanta was over.

The men of the 15th knew only that Gen. Hood was between Lovejoy and Palmetto and was probably regrouping his Confederate forces. The officers of the 15th Corps knew, too, that a regrouping could mean a counter-attack.

To strike back at the city successfully, the Confederates would need to recapture the high ground at Stewart Lakewood.

Hard-riding Confederate cavalry raiders, led by Maj. Gen. Alfred Iverson, more than once came shooting, slashing and yelling into small elements of the 15th, inflicting some casualties but leaving an entire corps ready to stand off Hood's army.

But the Confederates never launched a full-scale counter-attack.

In mid-November, the men of the 15th struck their tents, shouldered their muskets and moved out of the area.

In the days that followed, the City of Atlanta would be put to the torch. And the men of the 15th would see many more days of battle and bloodshed as they marched as the right flank of Sherman's army on his March to the Sea.

Because no Confederate counter-attack came, the "high ground" at Stewart Lakewood stands today as a symbol of Atlanta's progress and prosperity, and not as a monument to death and destruction.

30 Acres Of Parking In Center

Within the space of one city block, Stewart Lakewood designers have placed more than six acres of stores covering more than a quarter of a million square feet.

The entire Stewart Lakewood Center covers the equivalent of 16 city blocks including a massive 30 acres in parking area.

Nearly 700,000 specially designed bricks went to the construction of the mammoth center. The face brick on Stewart Lakewood is a special cocoa brown.

CONVENIENCE AND competition are the verbal cornerstones

Developers Of Center Lead Way

Patrons of Stewart Lakewood Center are the first shoppers in the Southeast to have the advantage of a super-convenient on-the-mall shopping center, thanks to the progress-minded efforts of four Atlantians.

The four, who are responsible for the financing, planning and opening of Stewart Lakewood are Mark Taylor, his father, Herbert Taylor, John O. Chiles and Alvin B. Cates Jr.

MARK TAYLOR, president of the American Building and Engineering Co., has been working on plans for the new center for more than three years.

He has been in the planning and construction business for 10 years. With the new center ready to open, Mr. Taylor has taken up the private building project of planning and constructing a home for himself.

A graduate of Cornell University and Georgia Tech, Mr. Taylor is a licensed pilot and flies as a hobby.

Mark's father, Herbert Taylor, also is a veteran of the building trade. He entered the field more than 25 years ago.

DURING THE WAR, Mr. Taylor went all-out in trying to relieve the housing shortage by converting old residences and apartments into attractive living quarters for war workers.

He said he believes the new Stewart Lakewood Center is destined to become a regional shopping center.

Working with the Taylors in Stewart Lakewood's development was John O. Chiles, president of Adams-Cates Co.

THE MAN responsible for leasing the shops and stores to more than 50 merchants in Stewart Lakewood is Alvin B. Cates Jr., vice president and treasurer of Adams-Cates Co.

Grant's Opening 4 Stores in One

3 Entrances Offer Access
To 25,000 Square Feet of Space

A colorful and spacious W. T. Grant "four-in-one" store will greet Stewart Lakewood shoppers Thursday with Grant's famous "known for value" prices and products.

Featuring a bright and cheerful color-coordinated decoration scheme, Grant's sparkling new store provides Stewart Lakewood shoppers with a leisurely, restful atmosphere.

And Grant's is designed for shoppers' convenience. There are entrances on three sides of the big, modern store.

THE STORE is air-conditioned and offers a luncheonette for a refreshing break while shopping. As a special added attraction, the new Grant's includes a big patio shop to provide all the outdoor living needs and luxuries for the suburbanite.

"Ours is the most complete junior department store in Stewart Lakewood Center," said manager John P. Arno.

Grant's "four-stores-in-one" includes a wide selection of family fashions, dry goods, homeware and hardware and a small wares department.

A horticulture department is included in the store for the "green thumbs" of the Stewart Lakewood area.

MORE THAN 90 courteous, specially trained employees will be on hand to serve Grant's customers.

The new Grant's is guaranteed not to cramp the style of any shopper, with an ample 25,000 square feet of floor space, plus 2,500 square feet in the patio shop.

Grant's also offers quick delivery and an easy-to-open "charge it" plan.

Jacobs Sale Celebrates Opening

From can-openers to antibiotics, Jacobs Pharmacy offers shoppers a variety of drugs and other products in its spacious self-service store in Stewart-Lakewood Center.

Known in the area for dependability and quality since opening in 1952, Jacobs plans a giant sale to celebrate the grand opening of Stewart-Lakewood Center Thursday.

The first shopping center pharmacy to offer self-service, Jacobs has gone all-out to be first in customer service since it opened with the original Stewart-Lakewood shops in 1952.

Three registered pharmacists are on duty to fill prescriptions with speed and dependability. Experienced cosmeticians work to aid the beauty-seeker and the beauty-keeper in selecting the cosmetics that will best fit her particular needs.

A big soda fountain offers the hungry and thirsty shopper everything from a nourishing hot lunch to a delicious, frosty milk shake.

Self-service combined with fast check-out counters make shopping at Jacobs a real pleasure. Jacobs in Stewart-Lakewood is managed by W. P. Parks, who joined the firm when the Stewart-Lakewood Pharmacy opened.

Mr. Parks, a Navy pharmacist in World War II, has lived in the Atlanta area since 1914. He attended The Citadel at Charleston, S.C., and the University of Georgia. A bachelor, he is a native of Orangeburg, S.C.

Assisting him in the management of the store is Ed Tate.

Thirty other courteous Jacobs employees are on hand to serve and aid Stewart-Lakewood shoppers.

The store offers a complete line of tobacco, candies, light hardware, variety store merchandise, paint and household implements.

A complete infants' department helps keep baby healthy and happy.

The Stewart-Lakewood store is one of 17 Jacobs pharmacies in the Atlanta area.

The new Grant's is one of more than 700 W. T. Grant Stores, located throughout the nation. The chain was founded more than 54 years ago by William T. Grant and has become famous for its "known for value" prices, products and customer service.

MANAGER ARNO has been with Grant's for the past 12 years. Mr. Arno comes to Atlanta from Tampa, Fla. He has served as department manager, assistant manager and merchandise manager in Grant's stores in several cities.

A graduate of the School of Retailing at New York University, Mr. Arno served in World War II as an infantry captain.

In outlining the services of the new store, Mr. Arno said:

"We have just completed a rigorous customer service training program with every one of our 90 sales people, schooling them to render thoughtful, considerate service, the kind so hard to find these busy days."

HE EXPLAINED that while the new store operates on a basic self-selection system, a large staff of sales people is always on hand, ready and eager to render whatever service a customer might desire. Each Grant sales person has voluntarily taken this pledge:

"I will serve you as I like to be served; I will do my best to make your shopping fun."

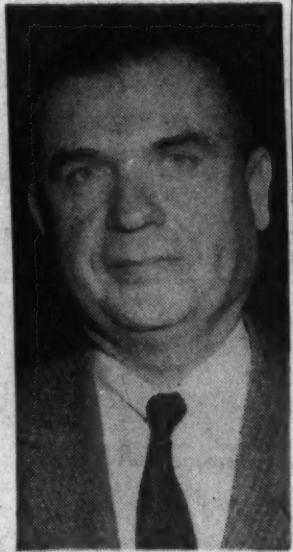

W. T. Grant management, too, is a product of a unique executive training program. Practically every man in an executive post with the company has come up through the ranks, including Edward Staley, president of the company, who started as a stockman in a local W. T. Grant store upon graduating from Miami University in Ohio. And his case is not unusual in the company. The five company presidents before him likewise started as trainees.

Mr. Arno is a graduate of the Grant executive training program and brings a wide and varied background of merchandising experience to his post as manager of the new store.

The story of how William T. Grant parlayed a sound idea and $1,000 into a nationwide family of stores reads like something from the pen of Horatio Alger.

At an early age, he set about supplementing the family budget. He had the usual paper route, then a door-to-door venture selling packets of blueing and eventually, midway through high school, quit school to take up regular employment.

While never a brilliant scholar, young Grant became a keenly observant student of retailing.

Barber Shop Specializes In Children

The seven barbers at the spacious Stewart-Lakewood Barber-shop may be among the bravest barbers in town. They look forward to cutting youngsters' hair.

In fact, they've issued a special invitation to the toddler trade.

"While mother shops, have dad and the little boys drop in for haircuts," suggests Charlie Vaughn, owner of the Stewart-Lakewood shop, Atlanta's biggest barbershop.

Especially trained to give all kinds of haircuts and handle all kinds of youngsters, Stewart-Lakewood barbers ply their art in a shop that is as modern as tomorrow.

The man-about-Stewart-Lakewood will find a complete line of barbering services in the new shop, while he relaxes in specially designed "President Club Chairs."

The shop itself is a masterpiece in modern design, streamlined in every detail—from the barber pole to the latter dispensers.

New Center Brings Dynamic Ideas

we believe we have succeeded.
"We always felt strongly that a successful shopping center answered the needs of the shoppers and it was from this standpoint that we approached the planning. We first found out what kind of center people wanted — what kind of service stores and what was necessary to make a shopping center the 'ultimate.'

FABRIC SHOP CHIEF
Mrs. Lunette Cerniglia

"We found what stores and services women wanted, and then we set about finding our tenants," said Mr. Taylor.

JOHN O. CHILES, one of the prime movers in the business venture, points with pride to the advantages of the center.

"The two things we are proudest of in this center," said Mr. Chiles, "are that we have been able to give shoppers the ultimate in conveniences as far as distances are concerned and that we have been able to provide competitive shopping."

"Our Stewart Lakewood plan provides that practically any merchandise can be purchased at more than one store and in some instances at five or six stores. This is particularly true in the area of major appliances," Mr. Chiles said.

Herbert Taylor, another backer

"THE SHOE FITS..."
J. & J.'s R. Richey of the center, considers the space-saving, on-the-mall plan one of the chief advantages of Stewart Lakewood.

Alvin Cates Jr. is responsible for leasing of the center to more than 80 tenants.

To keep things rolling at the shopping center, a Stewart Lakewood Merchants Assn. has been organized. Its purpose is "to encourage each member of the association to promote not only his own business, but the shopping center as a whole."

Melvin Johndrow, manager of the J. C. Penney store, is president of the organization.

Other officers are J. W. Cain, manager of Woolworth's, vice president; Ben A. Pelot, assistant vice president of the First National Bank of Atlanta, treasurer.

The board of governors includes W. B. McKenney of Rhodes Furniture; John Arno of W. T. Grant; Gene Thompson of Kroger; W. R. Phillips of the Candy Pan, and W. P. Parks of Jacobs.

Charles A. Rawson Jr., vice president of Charles A. Rawson & Associates, is executive secretary. Handling the legal aspects of the shopping center's operation will be the firm of Crenshaw, Hansell, Ware & Brandon.

Shoes Built To Fit Feet And Budgets

If the shoe fits, wear it. That adage may apply to some businesses. But there's a little more to it when it comes to offering fine footwear.

The shoe has to do more than fit. It should be stylish and made to fit the family budget as well as the foot, according to the standards of the new J. & J. shoe store, opening Thursday in Stewart Lakewood Center.

The new J. & J. store is a super-modern, custom-designed shop with plenty of floor space to allow for the display of a wide variety of merchandise.

Specializing in footwear for the whole family, J. & J.'s guarantee of "shoes that fit and satisfy" has made it one of Atlanta's fastest growing shoe store chains.

"The Stewart-Lakewood J. & J. was planned for the convenience of this area's residents who want a better selection of best name brands without having to go to town or even out of town to find them," said J. & J. manager R. Richey.

Manager Richey has been a chain shoe store manager in the Atlanta area for nearly five years. A native of Commerce, Mr. Richey is a navy veteran. He attended Georgia State College of Business Administration. The new Stewart-Lakewood J. & J. is one of five J. & J. stores in the Atlanta area. And more J. & J. stores are expected to open soon, according to Mr. Richey.

Cakes to Fit Every Occasion

Cakes for birthdays, cakes for weddings and even cakes to fit your hobby are among the delicious specialties turned out by the new Federal Bake Shop in Stewart Lakewood Center.

Cakes are just one specialty of Federal Bake Shop that turns out more than 1,000 bakery products.

And there's no wondering about how a particular order was baked. All Federal Bake products are made in public view behind glass at Stewart Lakewood.

Federal Bake's manager, James C. Freeman, says Federal is able to turn out the best quality bakery products using only fresh farm products — fresh milk, butter and eggs.

Among the items featured at Federal Bake's Stewart Lakewood shop are:

Decorated wedding, birthday and anniversary cakes; "hobby" cakes decorated with the hunter, fisherman or team sports enthusiast in mind; dinner cakes; French and Danish pastries, all kinds of bread; dinner and breakfast buns and cookies.

These are just a few of the many fine quality bakery items the customer may see in the making at Stewart Lakewood's Federal Bake Shop.

The Stewart Lakewood store is one of two Federal Bake Shops in the Atlanta area. Federal Bake Shops, Inc., is the largest retail bakery chain in the United States.

Federal Bake has 85 shops in 27 states. The firm was incorporated 37 years ago in Davenport, Iowa.

Federal Bake also boasts some of the most skilled bakers in the business "because we promote our employees from the ground up and we have a profit-sharing plan for employees," says Manager Freeman.

Mr. Freeman himself is a man who started at the bottom in the bakery business. He joined Federal Bake in 1933 as a porter. He later was promoted to baker's helper.

Working his way up the scale, Mr. Freeman later became district manager for Federal Bake, Inc. He was born in Asheville, N.C., and was reared and educated in Orlando, Fla.

The founder and owner of Mindy's is Mrs. M. L. Walker of Blairsville.

Everything in the store is designed with the customer in mind—her shopping habits and preferences dictated the construction from start to finish.

"This is certainly Atlanta's most complete food department store," said A. C. Farnell, Atlanta division general manager of Colonial Stores. "Every department is newer in design, larger in size, and even more convenient than was ever possible in our previous store in this center. In addition, many new features have been added, including a complete Sav-a-Stamp redemption center, to make your shopping trip the pleasure it ought to be."

THE NEW Colonial store boasts 22,600 square feet of beautifully designed shopping area. Store fixtures, service areas and checkout stands reflect modern taste and function.

The store will be managed by Lewis B. Moseley, known personally to many shoppers of the area. Mr. Moseley has 26 years' experience in food merchandising and customer service.

His staff includes R. E. Johnson, assistant manager; W. E. Taylor, produce manager, and B. E. Weldon, market manager.

THE NEW store's many features include:

1. New Sav-a-Stamp redemption center, with all catalog items conveniently displayed and available for immediate redemption with Sav-a-Stamp gift books. All of these items may be purchased at Colonial's usual low discount prices.

2. Unlimited Parking is offered for all Colonial's customers.

3. A modern grocery department with thousands of shoppers' favorite brands prominently displayed. Wide aisles with plenty of room for shopping carts make it a handy place to meet friends and neighbors each week.

4. More frozen foods than ever before are temptingly displayed in the newest, most modern open-top cases available, making selection of these labor-saving foods a pleasant task.

5. Many new cheeses are featured in Colonial's new dairy department, with many domestic and imported cheeses available, many of which can be found only in this beautiful store.

6. The finest meats are bought for customer selection by Colonial under the most modern and efficient methods possible in Atlanta today. All meat sold is personally inspected by Colonial meat experts at Colonial's ultra-modern meat warehouse, located only a few blocks away. Automatic wrapping facilities plus easy-to-reach self-service refrigerated cases add up to Colonial's famous quality service.

7. Complete selection of health foods, beauty aids, housewares, a larger and better product department, featuring a green thumb display of potted plants, plus automatic change makers at every check-out stand, combine to make a shopping trip to Colonial a new grocery buying experience.

Kroger to Open New Supermarket

Distinctive Store Is Styled For Shopping Convenience

Self-opening swinging doors mark the entrance to a new world of shopping ease and food values and variety at the new Kroger store in Stewart Lakewood Center.

The distinctively styled store, complete with in-store music and air conditioning, is designed to make weekly grocery buying a restful treat instead of a dreaded drudge.

"This store was planned with the homemaker at our elbow," said F. A. Williams, Atlanta division vice president of Kroger. "Today's homemaker likes to shop in a pleasant atmosphere. And our new store has it."

The Stewart Lakewood store was designed especially for Kroger by Howard Ketcham, nationally known color, lighting and design engineer. The new store features a "psychologically color-keyed" decoration scheme of dark aqua, dusty pink and gray.

ADDING to the atmosphere of friendliness and comfort are honey murals of farm scenes that repeat the interior colors. To keep the shopper comfortable, Kroger has installed low shelves to bring merchandise within easy reach.

Magic Carpet open-and-close doors and soft-tone fluorescent lighting help take the fatigue out of grocery buying.

The new store is a one-stop shopping store. Items have been placed on shelves so that the customer will have no trouble finding them. Placing these items was done scientifically, based on the results of an extensive survey of customer habits.

SIMILAR ITEMS are placed in the same area. And related departments are next to one another, saving the shopper time and steps. For instance, pancake flour is located next to the syrup shelves.

Check-out booths with the latest type conveyor stands have been installed near the exits to speed customers through the check-out lanes. Articles are moved from the front of the stand to the cash register by a machine-driven belt that allows a constant flow of items to pass the cashier during check-out. A divider automatically falls in place to allow one order to be bagged while another is being checked.

Spacious aisles allow customers to take their time without being crowded. Included in the new store's 11,544 square feet of floor space are packaged and canned goods, self-service meat and dairy departments, frozen foods, seafoods, produce, a fresh fruit and vegetable department, housewares and a complete supply of health and beauty aids.

AS AN ADDED attraction, the store has a department of growing plants and garden supplies.

Frozen food cases measuring 128 feet and nearly 200 feet of cases containing produce, meat and dairy products give the shopper plenty of variety.

Managing the new store is Gene Thompson, a native of Town Creek, Ala. Mr. Thompson comes to Stewart Lakewood from Bankhead Highway Kroger Store, where he was manager.

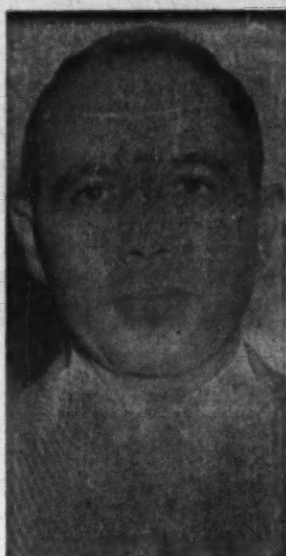

A 1954 graduate of Alabama Polytechnic Institute, Mr. Thompson has been with Kroger for five years. He served as manager of the Anniston, Ala., Kroger store, buyer for the Atlanta division office and co-manager of the Gadsden, Ala., store.

The new Stewart Lakewood store is one of 27 Kroger stores in the greater Atlanta area. Kroger, the third largest retail food chain in the nation, has more than 1,400 retail food markets in 21 states, including 54 in the Atlanta Division area.

The Kroger Co. was founded in 1883 by B. H. Kroger, son of a German immigrant. It has grown in 76 years from one small store on Cincinnati's river front to one of the best known food store chains in the country.

Kroger's freshness, friendliness and the store manager's "personal word guarantee of quality" have made Kroger stores a favorite with housewives everywhere.

Kroger enhances its reputation for quality and service by offering Tenderloin Beef and Top Value Stamps.

First National Bank Doubles Services

Moves to New Building In Stewart Lakewood Center

The Stewart-Lakewood branch of the First National Bank of Atlanta will double its banking services in a new ultra-modern building in the Stewart-Lakewood Center's grand opening Thursday.

Two drive-in teller windows, eight inside tellers and a big sign on top of the building to show time and temperature are features of the First National's new building, designed strictly to aid and serve Stewart-Lakewood shoppers.

No newcomer to the area, the First National established a branch in Stewart-Lakewood three and a half years ago.

Ben A. Pelot was named manager.

Under Mr. Pelot's guidance, the branch has successfully met the challenge of ever-expanding commerce in this fast-growing section by giving efficient, courteous banking service.

Mr. Pelot was recently named assistant vice president of First National.

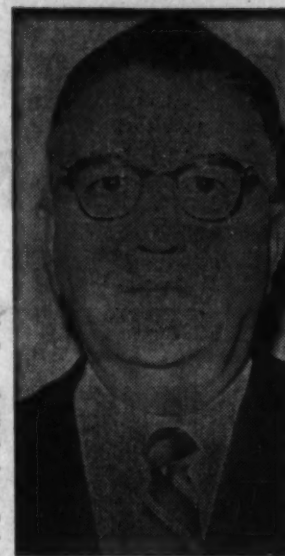

To continue to serve Stewart-Lakewood, the First National branch is increasing inside tellers from four to eight and doubling its drive-in window services.

Its new building will offer the banking shopper and businessman plenty of elbow room with 4,410 feet of floor space.

The branch is one of 11 First National branches in the Atlanta Metropolitan area.

Manager Pelot has not only participated in the expansion of the branch in Stewart-Lakewood. He also has witnessed the growth of the whole First National system, having joined the bank in 1918.

Mr. Pelot is a native of Atlanta. He is married to the former Miss Grace Hardman of Atlanta. The Pelots have one son, Ben Jr., and three granddaughters.

Aiding Mr. Pelot in management of the expanded branch bank are J. M. Drill, manager of the consumer credit department, and Harry Buchanan, head teller.

Lerner's Opening Its 273rd Shop

Firm Boasts Top Values
In Fashions That Are New

Another sparkling new Lerner Shop is opening Thursday in Stewart Lakewood Center. The 273rd store of the world's largest apparel chain will feature complete selections of merchandise for women, girls and boys.

Lerner Shops was founded in 1917 as a small chain of blouse shops. It has grown rapidly into a successful apparel business.

The opening of this new store is one more step forward in the direction of maintaining Lerner's position as the leader in the popular - priced fashion field. The president of Lerner Shops is Harold M. Lane, one of the company's founders.

LERNER SHOPS are located in most of the country's important towns and cities. On the East Coast they stretch from Portland, Maine, to Miami, Fla.; on the West Coast, from Seattle, Wash., to San Diego, Calif. This far-flung organization is directed from the New York office, with local control and supervision emanating from five branch offices—Atlanta, Los Angeles, Denver, Chicago and Jacksonville.

The fame of Lerner Shops rests on two main policies: emphasis on value and popular prices, plus the ability to offer their customers—their buyers in Pennsylvania, Oregon, New York or Georgia—the latest fashions almost simultaneously.

When fashions by leading American designers—Dior-inspired or gleaned from an Italian couturier house—appear in stores on Fifth avenue, Peachtree street, or Wilshire boulevard, the women of Erie, Pa., or Knoxville, Tenn., are able to buy at Lerner's and wear essentially the same new fashions at a price far below the cost of the originals. This is a joint accomplishment of the Lerner executives and the manufacturers with whom they work who are able to produce and offer the new fashion trends in immense quantities almost overnight.

THE REAL ESTATE department of Lerner Shops is in contact with real estate brokers all over the country. After an exhaustive survey, locations are decided upon by the board of directors. Lerner Shops' architectural department draws up the plans and basic store front design distinguishing all Lerner Shops. In this manner, the new store in Stewart Lakewood Center soon became a reality.

In line with today's trend to self-selection, the layout of the new Lerner Shop makes it easy to shop by giving customers as much contact with the merchandise as possible.

The Lerner Shop in Stewart Lakewood Center is the third Lerner Shop in Atlanta operated out of the office and warehouse here in Atlanta. The warehouse building is located at Spring and Eighth and services 30 stores in eight Southeastern states. Another shop will open in the Atlanta area soon.

The manager of the store in Stewart Lakewood Center will be Mrs. Jean Johnson, who previously had been a road supervisor operating out of Atlanta. The district manager will be Kenneth Morse. The general manager for the Southeastern division is Eugene Shaw.
